THE MILWAUKEE POOL for the rise, opened Sept. 20, already shows a profit of 50 per cent., and also the return of the option money.

SPECIAL and IMPORTANT.

OPTION POOLS.

OPTION POOLS.

OPENED EVERY MONDAY and THURSDAY by

SMITH and BERESFORD,

STOCK and SHARE BROKERS and OPTION DEALERS,

DEVONSHIRE CHAMBERS, Bishopsgate-street, London, E.C.

WE are, in this country, the INAUGURATORS of OPTION POOLS, by which the risk is strictly limited to the amount deposited, while the profit is unlimited, according to the favourable changes of the market during the continuance of the Pool.

OPTIONS are the simplicity of Stock Exchange dealings.

ONE STRIKING ADVANTAGE of "OPTION POOLS" is, that while a larger proportionate amount is required to be first laid out than in the case of "cover," the duration of the bargain for the intervening 30 days places the operator beyond the risk of loss from momentary fluctuation or panic, no matter how severe, and he is exempt from all ordinary charges of "commission," "contango," &c.

ANOTHER ADVANTAGE which it presents is the controlling power conferred upon the broker by the number, and, consequently, large amount, representing the subscription, tending to sustain or depress the stock dealt in, as may be desired.

WE INVARIABLY OPEN our OPTION POOLS for 30 days, which, according to our experience, proves to be ample time for verification of our prediction of a large profit.

FROM the NATURE of our INFORMATION, we consider loss on these operations to be reduced to the lowest minimum.

THE SHARES in our OPTION POOLS cost as follows, for thirty days:

MONEY MARKET.

FRIDAY EVENING.

This has been a very busy day in the discount market, mainly owing to the Stock Exchange settlement and a large efflux of gold. The pressure for money was severe, and, to avoid applications to the Bank of England, 4½ and even 4¾ per cent. was paid for loans for the day or till Monday next. Nevertheless, a heavy total—probably two millions—was borrowed at the national establishment on bills and stock at 4 per cent., the money being taken in most cases till Oct. 6. In one or two instances advances were granted till the 8th prox., but the directors, it is stated, refused to lend beyond that date, and this circumstance may be regarded as indicating a strong belief that the present minimum will not last long. Including £500,000 taken for Russia by Messrs. Baring, the withdrawal of bullion from the Bank was £580,000, but about £180,000 was sent in, chiefly from Central America and Paris, making a net outflow of £400,000, or, allowing for the receipt yesterday, about £250,000 since the date of the last return. This movement is not in itself sufficiently important to warrant an advance in the rate, but it is understood that a further sum of £400,000 to £500,000 will be required next week for Buenos Ayres, and £400,000 more may soon be wanted for St. Petersburg. The requisite funds here, it is believed, have been found by a syndicate connected with the new Russian loan, referred to this morning. Exports of bullion to other quarters on a smaller scale are expected, and a good deal of coin is likely to be sent soon to Ireland, to be followed later on by the dispatch of £700,000 or £800,000 to Scotland. On the other hand, further amounts will probably come to hand from the Continent, though supplies may soon be checked by the higher value of money abroad. At Paris the outside rate has advanced to 3¼ per cent., and at Berlin to 3½.

On the Stock Exchange the dealers were chiefly occupied with the completion of a very heavy settlement, and the amount of fresh business was smaller. Despite the extent of recent variations, no failures were announced. The markets were firm in the earlier hours, but subsequently relapsed, on a rumour that £700,000 in gold had been withdrawn from the Bank and news of a further advance in the value of money on the Continent. When it transpired that the actual bullion movement was, on balance, much less, a recovery set in, but this was only partial, and the last prices were, with some exceptions, lower than yesterday's. Consols fell ⅛ per cent., and Indian Three per Cents. were offered. Nearly all the international foreign bonds gave way, partly in sympathy with the depression on the Bourses. Egyptian, Greek, French, Italian, Spanish, and Turkish were mostly sold. Argentine Hard Dollars, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Santa Fé, and Venezuelan were in request and higher.

English railways declined, though the final quotations were not the worst. North British Deferred, Great Northern "A," and Sheffield "A" fell about ½ each, and some of the other descriptions ⅛ to ¼; but Hull and Barnsley rose 1½. American railroads opened strong, and afterwards improved, owing to the proposed advance in freight rates. Milwaukees were dealt in at 70⅞, and Eries at 31. The closing prices, though not the best, showed a rise in many shares ranging from ⅛ to 1½. The New York Central dividend was officially notified at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum after business hours. Grand Trunks receded ⅛ to ⅜, and Canadian Pacifics and Mexican (Vera Cruz) stocks were flatter. A rise of 1, however, occurred in Nitrate shares. In cables, a fresh relapse was reported in Anglo-American. Miscellaneous securities were steady, and tramway and omnibus higher. The principal change in the latter was a rise of 3 in London General. The ordinary shares of the New York Breweries Company were in request at par. The alterations in mines comprised an advance in Namaqua and some of the Indian gold, and a decline in Mason and Barry and Kimberley Central.

Sovereigns to the number of 580,000 were taken out of the Bank, including 500,000 for Russia, 50,000 for Lisbon, and 30,000 for the West Indies. On the other hand, £183,000 in bars and foreign coin was received. The Tagus has left for the River Plate with £60,530 in specie.

An inquiry prevailed for bar silver, and the price rose ⅛d, to 43⅛d per ounce. Mexican dollars were ⅛d higher, at 42⅛d. Calcutta Transfers improved 1-32d, to 1s 4 7-16d, and bills in Shanghai, ⅛d, to 4s 3⅛d; Four and a Half per Cent. Rupee Paper was ¼ up, at 72, ⅛, and the Four per Cents. were steady at 68, ⅛. The India Council has made a special allotment of bills on Calcutta to the amount of £11,680, at 1s 4 7-16d.

Continental Bourses were weaker. At Berlin Egyptian Unified and Preference, Hungarian, Austrian, and Mexican declined, but Prussian Three and a Half and Four per Cents. and Lombardo were better. A reduction of fully ¼ occurred in the Russian rouble. In Paris, Rio Tinto, Crédit Foncier, Suez Canal, Panama, Ottoman Bank, Italian, Portuguese, Spanish, and Turkish receded. The Three per Cent. Rentes relapsed 27½c, to 83f 07½c, and the Four and a Half per Cents. 15c, to 105f 60c. A fall of ½c, to 25f 41½c, was apparent in the exchange on London.

Subscriptions are invited by Messrs. C. de Murrieta and Co. for a final issue of 7,956 Mortgage Six per Cent. Bonds of £100 each, or a total of £795,600, of the Entre Rios Central Railway Extensions. The price is 99½ per cent., and, in addition to the direct obligation of the Province, the bonds are secured on the lines and certain taxes. Payments can be made in full on allotment, under discount at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, and the first half-yearly coupon is due in March next. The principal is redeemable at par, under the operation of a cumulative sinking fund of 1 per cent. per annum, and both principal and interest are payable in sterling in London. The railways are expected to be opened for traffic in the course of next year. On or before Thursday next the list will be closed.

An issue, at par, of 2,000 Deferred shares of £5 each is notified by the Brighton and Dyke Railway. The line, which is worked and maintained by the London, Brighton, and South Coast Company, was opened for traffic in September, 1887, and the prospectus states that upwards of 150,500 passengers travelled over it during the year ended August last. Interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum is guaranteed on these shares until December, 1890.

Applications will be received by the Royal Exchange Bank (Limited) for 1,000 Ordinary shares of £10 each of M'Namara and Co. (Limited). At the first annual meeting of the company, held recently, the net profits for the year were stated at £9,574, out of which, after allowing for a distribution at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum on the Preference shares, a dividend at the rate of 6 was declared on the Ordinary, leaving £717 to be carried forward.

With regard to the recent failure of Messrs. Calvert Brothers, worsted spinners, of Halifax, some remarkable disclosures are made in the report of the Official Receiver. It appears from this report that the firm was established in 1876 with a capital of £1,000, and that about five years ago the partners entered into large speculations in wool tops, these operations being the chief cause of the stoppage. The condition of the books is described as "disgraceful." At the expiration of 1885 the bookkeeper found an excess of payments over receipts amounting to over £83,000, and he was then told by one of the partners not to add up his book in future. As regards the excess of expenditure over receipts, no receipts for cash on account of tops appear in the books, but, on the other hand, all tops were paid for in bills, and the latter went through the books in the regular course. The cash-book, therefore, does not contain a proper record of receipts and payments, and is totally unreliable. About two months ago a large quantity of tops was bought by John Calvert on behalf of the firm at 2s 3½d per lb, for which bills, still running, were given, and the same tops were immediately resold to Tom Farrar, a woolstapler at Halifax, for cash at 1s 10d per lb, the latter reselling them at 1s 11½d. This, adds the Receiver, may be taken as a specimen of the way in which the business was conducted. The transactions between the Calverts and Farrar have reached £100,000 during the past year. Except John Calvert, who is believed to have absconded, and for whose arrest a warrant has been issued, the balance-sheet has been prepared under the direction of the debtors. Finally, the Receiver states that "in this estate there has been reckless, speculative, and dishonest trading, abuse of credit, trading with insufficient capital, and trading after the capital has been lost, and with the knowledge that it had been lost."

Application has been made to the Stock Exchange Committee to appoint a settling day in and to grant a quotation to the following securities: Brazil Great Southern Railway Company (Limited), £140,500 Six per Ct. Debenture Stock in lieu of Seven per Ct. Debentures; Debenture Corporation (Limited), £500,000 Four and a Half per Ct. First Mortgage Debentures;

NEWMARKET NOTES.

The wind-up to the Newmarket First October was very tame indeed. The card only embraced six events, and without the Rous Memorial Stakes and the Moulton Handicap all would have been leather and prunella. A return to the unfavourable weather experienced on the first day materially affected the strength of the company, and it is to be hoped that an entirely different state of affairs will prevail when we are next summoned to "headquarters." Three of the four races decided on the flat were restricted to selling platers, and in two instances Mr. Beddington was in the unlucky position of second, Jolly Tar succumbing to Banter in the Rowley Mile and Extortion to Doreuse in the last five furlongs of the Abingdon Mile. For the first-named event Forest Dancer was a great favourite, but he only cut a moderate figure, and Banter had won well from the foot of the hill. On this form it was lucky for the backers of Dornoch that Banter missed the All-aged Trial Stakes, as Greville, who was only beaten two heads from the Kingsclere colt, now finished a long way behind. Needles, by her success in the Selling Nursery, pointed to the paper chance of Doreuse for the Selling Plate next in order, and she gave Extortion such a sound thrashing that she could not have been dear to Mr. Spalding for 170 guineas. El Dorado was not pulled out for the Rous Memorial Stakes, and he left Gulliver, Gagoul, and Evergreen to represent the penalised division. Although well fancied in the order named, this trio played inferior parts in the betting to Laureate, and Mr. Hammond's handsome colt gave another taste of his smartness by a clever victory. The other three mentioned above finished all of a heap, and Evergreen has not stood still since he secured the Breeders' Foal Stakes at Manchester just a week since. At the top of the town Benburb, who was within an ace of creating a sensation in the Triennial on Wednesday, cantered home by himself, as the moment that Berey was called upon he ran all over the course, and an inexperienced horseman might have found some difficulty in retaining his seat. Bismarck's trial horse for the Cambridgeshire, The Rejected, was carrying a big weight in the Moulton Handicap, and ran more for a public line than with any idea that he would catch the judge's eye. For all that he was upsides with the two favourites, Helmsley and The Tyke, from the fall of the flag, and finally disposed of the three-year-old by a head. This performance is bound to help Bismarck in the Cambridgeshire, for which Minting has been partly resuscitated, on the strength of having resumed cantering work. Trayles is said to be suffering from a badly cracked heel, and his knock-out for the Cesarewitch looks fatal.

LONDON BETTING—FRIDAY.

There was a fair amount of betting on the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire to-day. Kenilworth left off a good favourite at 6 to 1, while Trayles declined to 100 to 6. A bet of 1000 to 100 taken about Ténébreuse landed the French mare second favourite, and Acme stood at 100 to 9. Decision and Polydor were in good request, and Governor Waller was backed at 1000 to 20. For the Cambridgeshire 9 to 1 was taken about Mamia, and a point more booked to Danbydale, while Bismarck was backed at 100 to 8. Minting, having resumed work, came back to 100 to 7, and 2000 to 100 was taken about Sheen, while Sandal figured at 25 to 1. Prices:

MR. BALFOUR ON IRISH EVICTIONS.

The subjoined reply has been received by a correspondent by Mr. Balfour's direction:

"Irish Office, Sept. 27, 1888.

"Dear Sir—In a letter, dated Sept. 22, and addressed to the Chief Secretary for Ireland, you question the accuracy of an account furnished by an 'English eye-witness' of an Irish eviction. In acknowledging your communication Mr. Balfour has directed me to meet your inquiries by a short comment on the testimony of Mr. Trow, whose experiences on the Clanricarde estate are set forth in the newspaper cutting which you are good enough to enclose.

"I have carefully read Mr. Trow's description of two evictions in the neighbourhood of Woodford. It appears to be given in good faith, and, whenever it deals with facts actually witnessed, it is, allowing for political bias, a fairly accurate statement. In this it compares favourably with the large majority of similar documents; but, in spite of these merits, its value is wholly vitiated owing to the common error into which the writer has fallen of founding his view of the social state of Ireland on the observations of one day, spent in entire ignorance of all the events which have previously taken place on the spot selected for investigation.

"I will first deal with an incident which, had the version of it given been correct and full, could alone be said to argue a want of feeling on the part of the authorities. In speaking of the removal from a hut of a young man 'dying of consumption,' Mr. Trow, however, has evidently been misinformed. John Fahy, to whom he alludes, was not, so far as I can ascertain, consumptive, but a confirmed epileptic. The sheriff had no other course open to him but to allow 'Fahy' to be removed from the premises, viewing the fact that the dispensary doctor, who had for years been attending him for epilepsy, refused positively to certify that his life would be exposed to any risk by that operation. This man, further, was only obliged to spend one hour and a half outside his door on a fine evening, and was then permitted to re-enter the house. The eviction, in fact, appears to have been conducted in the very 'spirit of human and Christian forbearance,' which Mr. Trow is unable to discover in the administration of the law. The account of these two evictions is a long one, but, if stripped of mere expressions of opinion, the above incident is the only one really requiring explanation, for all the rest resolves itself into two sets of facts: (1) The poverty of buildings and land in the neighbourhood; and (2) The large force of police and soldiers employed, both of which, even as referred to by Trow, are only likely to mislead those who have an equally limited acquaintance with the circumstances of the evictions he witnessed, and with the recent history of the locality in which they occurred.

"1. It is unnecessary to examine the accuracy of the opinion here expressed on the value of some of the land, and the poor circumstances of its occupiers. I may venture, however, to say that the man who represented his wages, and those of his fellows, to be but a shilling a day was apparently—and this is not unknown in Ireland—imposing upon the first Englishman he found only too ready to believe such a tale. The labourer's wage ranges at present from 1s 6d to 2s 6d a day all over the country. But it is not easy to see the connection between the opinion, whatever its value, and the evictions in question. They are admitted to be legal; whether they are harsh, i.e., carried out for non-payment of excessive rents which the tenant is willing but unable to pay, can only be decided by the knowledge of affairs at Woodford, which Mr. Trow apparently lacks. The chief of the tenants, for instance, evicted on this and the following days, was a Mr. Tulley, the notorious 'Doctor' Tulley, so named for his advice to dose the police with 'leaden pills' (bullets). He had announced his intention to resist eviction by force, and, as a matter of fact, did so resist until overpowered by numbers. Now what were the circumstances which led to his eviction? He held an excellent farm at a very low rent, but had paid none at all for three years. His rent was nearly exactly 50 per cent. under the valuation of the land alone. He was offered, in common with the other tenants, a reduction upon this of 20 per cent., and yet he absolutely refused to pay a penny. That is, he refused to pay a sum which, on his arrears of three years, would have been 70 per cent. less than the Poor Law valuation of his land. Again, one of the very tenants whom Mr. Trow saw evicted, owed only £27 10s. The agent of the estate, Mr. Tener, at the eviction offered him £300 for the stock on his land, and the balance to his credit in his bank-book; but the offer was declined, and the man was evicted for the sum of £27 10s. Facts such as these prove beyond the possibility of cavil that eviction in these cases is the result, not of the poverty of the tenants, but of the intrigues of agitators, who intimidate their victims in order to provide scenes for amateur politicians from England.

"2. Agitation and the lawlessness it engenders, alone necessitate the forces of police and soldiers, to whose presence Mr. Trow takes exception. He has overlooked the fact that the district around Woodford, in which these evictions took place, is the very worst in all Ireland. There have been more murders, attempted murders, mutilation of cattle, burning of property, and other serious agrarian outrages within a limited area around Woodford during the last eight years than in any other area at all comparable in size in any other part of the three kingdoms. Here, too, occurred the first serious riots of late years at evictions. In the autumn of 1886 bridges were broken down, roads torn up, telegraph wires were cut, and the evictions had to be carried out by an army of police and military advancing as if through an enemy's country. In consequence of these riots thirty-five persons were convicted by a jury of assaults and obstructions to the officers of the law. Chief Baron Palles, in sentencing these men to various terms of imprisonment, varying from twelve to eighteen months, laid down, in the most energetic terms, the imperative duty of the Executive on such occasions to enforce the law and protect its officers. I am aware that Separatist apologists have not refrained in some cases from aspersing the integrity of the judges of the land, but, so far as I know, they have never accused the impartiality of Chief Baron Palles. Such a pronouncement justifies the presence of a large force. Their conduct may be justified from the very description under discussion. Mr. Trow only mentions the hustling of two or three men and the cuffing of another who had deliberately passed through the cordon within which their presence was forbidden. The police of Woodford are boycotted and illtreated in every conceivable way, under the direction of men like 'Dr.' Tully. At evictions filth, offensive matter, and sometimes lime are thrown in their faces. Mr. Trow mentions, without comment, that 'the lads poured hot water on them,' and yet is indignant because they obeyed their orders in clearing the space within the cordon. This they appear to have done with no greater violence than is exerted on a racecourse or parade ground at a review in this country. Mr. Trow would not, I imagine, object to regulations put in force by the police for the convenience of the public in England. It is only in Ireland, where they are necessary to prevent the shedding of blood, that they appear to him tyrannical and inhuman.

"The writer of this account finally concludes that 'Home Rule' is the only cure for an agrarian agitation, and this fulfils the expectation of those by whom it is organised. Without following him on this ground I may remark that the scenes which he witnessed are contrived at the expense of the tenant alone, and that every Englishman who makes public his readiness to argue from such narrow and artificial premises to a conclusion involving the welfare of the Empire holds out to the Separatists in Ireland a direct incentive to continue their work of destroying with bribes the honesty of the greedy, and by intimidation the liberty of the weak.—Yours faithfully, "GEORGE WYNDHAM.

"J. J. Armstrong, Esq."

THE REGISTRATIONS.

The revision of the Parliamentary lists of voters and county electors for the Metropolitan constituencies is now half completed, and the anticipations of lengthened and tedious proceedings before the revising barristers have been falsified by events. This is mainly due to the agreements arrived at beforehand by the political agents as to the claims and objections and to the new arrangement of the lists.—Yesterday, at Bethnal-green, Mr. Bathurst said that in his opinion policemen were not entitled to vote as County Council electors. It was then pointed out that Mr. R. Wallace, at Islington, had declined to construe the Act on this point, whereupon Mr. Bathurst remarked that it was the duty of a revising-barrister to do so.

At St. Pancras the claim of Mr. James Willing in respect to premises in the Gray's Inn-road was disallowed, on the ground that he was only a shareholder or managing director.

METROPOLITAN PAUPERISM.

The subjoined official weekly return of Metropolitan pauperism was issued on Wednesday:

		Indoor.	Outdoor.	Total.
3rd Week of Sept.,	1888	55,316	36,330	91,646
" "	1887	54,457	35,195	89,652
" "	1886	52,121	34,510	86,631
" "	1885	51,700	34,017	85,717

Vagrants relieved in the metropolis on the last day of the third week of September, 1888: Men, 783; Women, 155; Children under sixteen, 28—Total, 966.

Population of the Metropolis in 1881, 3,815,000.

The late Mr. Daniel Thwaites, J.P., has left £10,000, through his daughter, Mrs. Yerburgh, wife of the member for Chester, to the Blackburn and East Lancashire Infirmary.

The statue executed by Mr. J. E. Boehm of the late Earl of Shaftesbury has been placed upon its pedestal in Westminster Abbey, and on Monday, at four o'clock, the ceremony of unveiling will be performed by the Baroness Burdett-Coutts. The day is the third anniversary of the Earl's death.

The liveries for the attendants of Mr. Alderman and Sheriff Gray have been made by Messrs. Samuel Brothers, tailors, of Ludgate-hill. The full state coats are of blue silk velvet, tastefully trimmed with gold lace and having an embroidered coat-of-arms on the sleeves, and they present a rich and elegant appearance.

SPANISH NAVY.—A Reuter's telegram, dated Madrid, Sept. 26, states: "The Gazette to-day publishes decrees ordering the construction of a first-class cruiser at Cadiz, a cruiser of 7,000 tons at the arsenal of Carthagena, and two more, one of 7,000 and the other of 3,000 tons, at Ferrol. Four torpedo boats are also to be built. These additions to the Spanish Navy are ordered irrespective of the three cruisers which are to be constructed at Bilbao."

MILITARY DISFRANCHISEMENT.—All the sergeants and trumpeters of the 6th Brigade Depot Royal Artillery, stationed at Dungannon, together with about fifty men, were disfranchised in East Tyrone, owing to their being absent for artillery practice. The result will, it is stated, considerably strengthen the Nationalist majority in the division.

THE RECENT VOLCANIC ERUPTION IN JAPAN.—Many inquiries have been received by members of the Society of the Japanese Residents in England as to the means of remitting contributions for the relief of the sufferers from the recent eruption of Mount Bandai, Wakamatsu, Japan. For the information of those who wish to subscribe, it may be stated that arrangements have now been made with the Yokohama Specie Bank, 84, Bishopsgate-street Within, E.C., by which they will transmit such contributions as may be sent to them before Oct. 10.

THROAT IRRITATION AND COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use Epps's Glycerine Jujubes. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.—Only in boxes 7½d., and tins 1s. 1½d., labelled "James Epps and Co., Homœopathic Chemists." Dr. George Moore, in his work on "Nose and Throat Diseases," says: "The Glycerine Jujubes prepared by James Epps and Co. are of undoubted service as a curative or palliative agent;" and Dr. Gordon Holmes, Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary, writes: "After an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit in almost all forms of throat disease."—[ADVT.]

Spirone is the remedy for Coughs and Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Laryngitis, Pharyngitis, Croup, Diphtheria, Whooping Cough, Catarrh, Sore Throat, Quinsy, Loss of Voice, and all other complaints of windpipe, nose, and throat. The Spirone Company (Limited), 17a, Duke-street, Manchester-square, London. Pamphlet free on application. Free dispensary for the poor, 46, Fitzroy-street, Fitzroy-square, W.C.—[ADVERTISEMENT.]

METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS.

The first meeting of the Metropolitan Board of Works after the vacation was held at the office, Spring-gardens, yesterday, Lord Magheramorne presiding.

A deputation waited upon the board with a memorial containing resolutions passed at a public meeting in Poplar on Monday with reference to the proposed tunnel between Blackwall and East Greenwich. It was urged that, before the board expired, steps should be taken at least to commence this important work, the necessity for which had been long recognised.

The subject was referred to the Works and General Purposes Committee for consideration and report.

Mr. SELWAY moved: "That a concise history of the work of the board from its establishment to the present time, be prepared." He wished to have a record of the operations of the board in a summary form, instead of the thirty-two or thirty-three annual reports which had been issued.

Colonel HUGHES, M.P., seconded the motion.

Mr. MARK JUDGE proposed an amendment to the effect that the suggested history should be confined to the work of the committees, but this was not seconded.

The motion was carried with one dissentient, and the compilation of the history was entrusted to a committee consisting of the chairman, deputy-chairman, Mr. Richardson, Mr. Runtz, and Mr. Selway, in conjunction with the officers of the board.

It was reported that letters had been received from the Greenwich District Board and the Vestry of Battersea transmitting copies of resolutions passed by those bodies protesting against the Board of Work expending money for the purpose of appearing by counsel before the Royal Commission. In connection with the same inquiry a letter from the vestry of St. George-the-Martyr, Southwark, expressed the opinion that the salary of the chairman ought to cease forthwith, and that the Board of Works should be dissolved at the earliest possible date.

A letter from the Lord Chamberlain, transmitting copies of reports on the annual inspection of theatres, and inquiring whether there was any reason to prevent the usual renewal of the licences on the 29th inst., was referred to the Building Acts' Committee.

IS MARRIAGE A FAILURE?—No, not if people use Aspinall's Enamel to make their homes bright and beautiful. Wherever a home is bright it is happy. N.B.—Aspinall's Enamel is the only one guaranteed to make marriage a success; imitations will probably make it a worse failure than they themselves are. GERMAN COURT AND POLITICS.

THE DIARY CONTROVERSY.

[TELEGRAMS FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.]

BERLIN, Sept. 28.

The forthcoming prosecution against the person who communicated the Emperor Frederick's Diary to the Deutsche Rundschau is the topic of very heated general discussion. The bitterness of language used on both sides in the cafés and other places of public-meeting in this capital is only equalled by the tone of the daily papers. The name of the person above referred to is said to be known to Prince Bismarck. Whilst judicial action is pending, it is out of place to say anything on the merits of the case; besides which it would be a continual repetition to reproduce the comments of both sides.

The Conservatives, as their organ, the Post, puts it, consider that Prince Bismarck has again shown how ready he is to put his own personal interests into the background for the sake of the Empire. And the National-Zeitung excuses the Chancellor for revealing State Secrets on the ground that he was forced to do so by others.

The Berliner Tageblatt, representing the Liberal side, says that the publication of the Chancellor's Report will excite painful surprise all through the Empire, and that the details cited by Prince Bismarck as errors of fact and chronology are, indeed, very trifling and unimportant, something similar to what the French call chercher la petite bête.

Anyhow, we have a most sensational trial in store for us.

It appears that official opinion here attributes the recent rising in East-Africa to the fear of the slave-dealers that, under the recent concessions made to the German East-African Society, greater efforts will be made to suppress the Trade. As this would be a serious pecuniary loss to these Arab dealers in human flesh, they are said to have worked on the religious fanaticism of their fellow-countrymen to drive away all Europeans. In any case, however, I understand that both the English and German Governments are acting in unison, and that the latter would under no circumstances take rigorous measures against the insurgents without consulting England. There is no question of a bombardment, for the simple reason that it would not be the guilty that would suffer.

The Sultan will be expected to restore order and to bring the offenders to justice. If he should be unable to do so with his own troops, assistance might be given him, but nothing of the kind is as yet contemplated.

The Government here rather fears that an attack must have been made at Lindi, which is a centre of the slave-trade, and doubtless that more Europeans may have been massacred there also.

It is highly important to know that the German Government in no way supports the Emin Pasha Relief Expedition, which is consequently probably doomed to failure. The view is that these armed expeditions merely excite the native populations against Europeans generally, and only destine those accompanying them to almost certain death. The same view is held here about Stanley's expedition.

Carl Junker is expected to speak here in a day or two before the East-African Society, but, under the circumstances, what he says will have very little practical weight.

VIENNA, Sept. 28.

The latest "Berlin Scandal" has materially contributed to confirm the opinion generally entertained in this country that, by the death of the late Emperor William, the German Empire lost its mainstay, and will now have a critical period to traverse. It was not foreseen, however, that its further existence would call forth a series of "Great Wars," as is now apparent. It was, on the contrary, universally hoped that the gigantic struggle looming in the distance might, by the efforts of diplomacy, be averted. Prince Bismarck seems to think not, and imparts the melancholy tidings that the War required to found German unity will entail many more, so that this will prove to be a "warlike century." That is the price the World will have to pay for "German Unity." The revelations contained in the publication of the Deutsche Rundschau are of trifling interest compared to Prince Bismarck's statement touching the inevitableness of more great wars. The absurd theory which some great instructors have sought to impress upon the public that the vast armaments for which the European taxpayers have been called upon to provide constitute a guarantee for the maintenance of Peace thus crumbles to the ground. The European Powers have been arming for War, and to judge from the document published yesterday Peace can hardly be of long duration.

Its reference to the Francophil tendencies of the English Court caused some little surprise here, as it had always been understood that the German marriages of the English Royal Family were rather a proof that contrary tendencies prevailed in the regions spoken of. That passage of the Chancellor's report reads unpleasantly in every way, and the impression here is that it must needs give umbrage to an exalted personage who has always kept scrupulously aloof from politics. The Chancellor is, however, accustomed to speak out his mind irrespective of individual susceptibilities, and not unfrequently his disregard of conventional forms gives his utterances an unintentional crudeness.

In Dr. Busch's book on the Franco-German war a "great lady" whom his Highness certainly never meant to offend is designated as "petticoats." There is consequently no reason why anybody should take exception at what is said in the Report published yesterday about the English Court.

People here deplore that the name of the late Emperor Frederick should again figure in a bitter controversy, but of course the fault lies with those who have published the alleged "spurious Diary."

BERLIN, Sept. 28.

The police made a search yesterday in the publishing offices of the Deutsche Rundschau, but without making any discovery.

KAISER WILHELM'S TOUR.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

STUTTGART, Sept. 28.

A State Banquet was given in the White Hall of the Castle here this afternoon in honour of the Emperor.

The health of his Majesty was proposed by King Charles of Wurtemberg in the following terms: "I drink to the health of his Majesty the German Emperor, at whose visit we so greatly rejoice. I wish that God may grant him a long and prosperous reign, for the happiness of the Imperial family and the welfare of our German home."

In reply the Emperor said: "I heartily thank your Majesty for your friendly words, but I thank you, more particularly, for your Majesty's gracious invitation, which has afforded me the opportunity of coming into this beautiful country; which enjoys under your blessed rule so visible a prosperity; which, even in the middle ages, supplied Germany with so many famous rulers; and which was the cradle of my fathers. You must know that South German blood flows in my veins as in those of each one of you. Actuated by these sentiments I drink to the health of your Majesty."

THE SERVIAN SCANDAL.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

VIENNA, Sept. 28.

King Milan will preside to-day and to-morrow at conferences to be held at Gleichenberg of the Servian jurists summoned thither for the purpose of finally determining the form and procedure which are to be adopted to procure the complete divorce of the King from Queen Natalie. M. Mijatovics, the Servian Minister for Foreign Affairs, will also be present at this discussion.

The King adheres firmly to his resolve to insist upon a divorce, and not to accept a mere separation.

Several prominent party leaders in Servia who have hitherto remained neutral have, it is reported, now been won over to the King's views, as they consider that the maintenance of the Sovereign's authority is concerned in the case.

Royal Military College.—An examination for cadetships at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, under the regulations issued with G.O. 126 of 1887, will take place on Nov. 21 and following days. The medical examination of the candidates will take place on the two previous days, at 109, Victoria-street. There will be 147 cadetships to be awarded, of which 125 will be for infantry, 15 for cavalry, and 7 for West India Regiments. Intending competitors must inform the military secretary before the date fixed for examination whether they elect to be considered candidates for cavalry or infantry.

Sealskin Garments and Ladies' Furs at half-price. [illegible] ... to be sold regardless of cost.—Phillips' City Fur Warehouses, 52, 53, Newgate-st.—or any address.—[Advt.]

Mirzapore Carpets.—Within the last month a large shipment of these goods has come to hand, and in consequence prices are very much reduced; for instance, for 42s. net cash you can buy a carpet, 9ft. 3in. long and 6ft. 2in. wide. No doubt these prices will not be long continued. The importers are Messrs. Treloar and Sons, 68, 69, and 70, Ludgate-hill, London, E.C.—[Advt.]

NEWS FROM VIENNA.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

VIENNA, Sept. 28.

The Prince of Wales left Vienna this afternoon for Buda-Pest.

To-morrow the Empress of Austria returns from Ischl, and will take up her residence at Schonbrunn.

Crown-Princess Stephanie, who has been staying, after a long cruise in the Adriatic, on the Island of Lacroma, near Ragusa, is now on her way homewards.

The Bishop of Linz, Dr. Muller, died this morning at the age of sixty-six. He was one of the most distinguished prelates in Austria, and was indefatigable in his exertions to complete what promises to be one of the largest and finest Cathedrals in the Empire. When finished it will be a splendid specimen of Nineteenth Century architecture. The foundation stone was laid by the deceased bishop's predecessor, Cardinal Rudiger, about twenty years ago, and since then it has progressed rapidly towards completion, after plans drawn up by the present architect of the Cologne Cathedral.

King Milan of Servia purposes staying at Gleichenberg in Styria till the middle of next month. It will not endear his Servian Majesty to Englishmen when they hear that he has been "fox-shooting" on a neighbouring estate. His son, the Crown-Prince Alexander, visited Gratz this week, and went to the theatre there, which is artistically superior to those of other Austrian provincial towns.

A few days ago the French papers were making quite a fuss about the extreme old age of M. Chevreul, who has just entered his 103rd year. Centenarians are, however, quite common among the hardy mountaineers of Dalmatia, Montenegro, and Albania. Every mountain-hamlet has its quota of hale and hearty eighteenth-century relicts. The transparent atmosphere purified by the sea-breeze favours longevity, and not only the human species but the horse and the dog are longer-lived than in the less-favoured coast districts. At Miljevci, in the neighbourhood of Sutomore, the oldest female inhabitant is 106, and in the same part of the country, at Misics, there is a hard-working labourer who has seen his 110th birthday. Quite recently a man aged 101 walked for four hours from Misics to Antivari, straight over the rocky mountain-paths, to post a letter which he had written in his native dialect to his son at Constantinople, and to get the address put in Turkish so as to insure its safe delivery. One old fellow—quite a hero among his rustic neighbours—can give a graphic description of the "Burning of Moscow," which he witnessed when serving under Napoleon I. A few years ago he lost his wife in her ninety-sixth year. His memory is fresh when narrating the eventful reminiscences of his youth, only he confuses dates and imagines that all he ever did and saw of more than ordinary interest occurred yesterday afternoon. He owns to having served as a soldier under six Sultans, subsequent to which he was a letter-carrier for forty years. The deportment of the Albanian and Montenegrin highlander, even at an advanced age, is strikingly erect, whereas the mountaineer of the Tyrol seldom attains three-score without being bent almost double owing to the constant stooping required by agricultural pursuits in the mountains.

The Prince of Wales arrived here this evening, and was received at the railway station by Mr. Barrington, the British Consul-General.

INVESTMENT OF SUAKIN.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

SUAKIN, Sept. 28.

During last night the rebels entrenched themselves in new positions, one being 500 yards in front of the left water-fort and another 800 yards to the left of that fort.

From yesterday afternoon until nearly midnight a heavy fire was continued on both sides, the Gannet using her machine guns as well as her cannon.

Deserters from the right trenches report that the enemy suffered severely yesterday, one of the shells killing seventeen men and another nine.

The casualties on our side yesterday were three gunners wounded in the right water-fort.

The telephone wire connecting the forts with the town was again cut during the night, but was once more repaired this morning.

CAIRO, Sept. 28.

An official despatch received here from Suakin states that the enemy are extending their trenches, and daily strengthening their position. The garrison fire was unable to dislodge them, and they would therefore have to be driven out; but the present force, together with the battalion starting for Suakin to-morrow, were insufficient to effect this purpose.

The military officials consider further reinforcements necessary before the offensive can be taken, and also express the opinion that the Egyptian army should be increased.

SIKKIM AND THE THIBETANS.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

SIMLA, Sept. 28.

Colonel Graham telegraphs to the Indian Government that he pursued the Thibetans as far as Rinchigong, encountering no opposition. The enemy fled before him.

The British forces occupied Chumbi on Wednesday, and seized the Rajah of Sikkim's palace in which his mother lives. Colonel Graham took possession of a quantity of papers found there.

He is now returning to Gnatong, where he is expected to arrive to-day.

Several of the enemy's guns were captured, and the British victory was complete.

THE AFGHAN REBELS.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

BOMBAY, Sept. 28.

Advices are to hand from Afghanistan, stating that the Bamian column of the Ameer's troops, under Gholam Hyder Khan, arrived on the 17th inst. at Haibak, where it was expected that the rebels would be encountered. There was no sign of Ishak Khan's troops, however, and the Ameer's forces were well received by the inhabitants.

Ishak Khan is believed to have gone to Tash Kurgan from Khanabad, leaving the latter place in charge of the Mir of Katagan, who has declared for Ishak.

It is still uncertain whether or when the proposed British Mission to Cabul shall start.

FATAL FIRE AT CRONSTADT.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

St. Petersburg, Sept. 28.—Later telegrams from Cronstadt give some terrible details of the fire there. The flames were first perceived about two o'clock in the morning, in a wooden tenement house, several stories in height, and they spread with such rapidity as to cut off all escape from the hapless inmates by means of the staircase. They collected at the windows, uttering despairing cries for help, but before the fire brigade arrived the flames had gained on them, and many persons, in their terror, threw themselves down on to the stone-flagged street below. Almost all who took this desperate leap were badly injured, and some sustained mortal hurts.

Before help could reach those who remained in the burning building sixteen had perished in the flames.

Railway Extension.—The London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Company have just completed a new and direct route to Tunbridge-wells, and yesterday Mr. J. P. Bickersteth and Mr. R. Jacomb Hood, directors, accompanied by Mr. Allen Sarle, the general manager, and several of the principal officers of the company, inspected this new line, which forms an important link in the Brighton company's system, previous to the opening for public traffic on Monday next. It runs through Oxted and Edenbridge, via Groombridge, to Tunbridge-wells. The railway was constructed by Mr. J. T. Firbank to the plans of Mr. F. D. Banister, resident engineer of the company, and under the personal supervision of Mr. George Lopes, assistant and resident engineer. Sir Edward Blount, president of the Western of France Railway, accompanied the party, who were much pleased with the character of the works.

Funeral of the Queen's Nurse.—General Sir Henry Ponsonby, on behalf of the Queen and Royal family, and Colonel Clarke, on behalf of the Prince of Wales, yesterday attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Hull, at Clewer. Mrs. Hull—then Miss Marianne Cripps—entered her Majesty's and the Prince Consort's service as head nurserymaid when the Prince of Wales was three months old, and remained in the Royal service till 1858, when she married Mr. Hull, who had been long in the Royal service, and died in 1869 as one of the Queen's messengers. Mrs. Hull was greatly beloved by the Royal family, who are much grieved at her loss. On frequent occasions she had charge of the children of the Empress Frederick, the Prince of Wales, and the late Grand Duchess of Hesse (Princess Alice). Mrs. Hull died, after an illness of some months, in her seventy-eighth year, on the 24th inst., at Windsor.

Oldest, best, and cheapest house in the world. Estimates free.—[Advertisement.]

MORMONS AND ENGLISH CHILDREN.

Our New York correspondent telegraphs:

Several English children brought over here by Mormon agents early in the week have been rescued from the possession of this so-called religious body, and will be sent back to their own country by the steamship Wisconsin. There are eight or ten of them, ranging in ages from nine to fifteen years. Two of them, however, object to returning to the Old World.

Happily, I can announce that the yellow fever epidemic in Florida is now on the decrease, and that the cases last reported are said to be of a much milder type.

The Board of Trustees of the Gratuity Fund discovered on Thursday that they had been the victims of a swindle, carried out by means of forged mortgages. At present the amount of their losses is estimated at $167,000. This is the second forgery found out during the week, the confidential clerk of a leading law firm having been exposed as the perpetrator of similar frauds.

Justice Matthews, of the Supreme Court, who has been dangerously ill for some time, is now recovering his health.

A quantity of nitro-glycerine, which was being conveyed on board a steamer to the Torpedo-station at Newport, exploded from some cause or another not exactly known, and set the vessel on fire. Much damage was occasioned by the flames before they could be extinguished.

AMERICAN MARKETS.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]

New York, Sept. 28.—Stocks to-day have been strong and active almost throughout, the market closing very firm, at the highest figures of the day. Money easy. Petroleum, firmer tendency. Flour strong. Sugar and iron, firm but quiet. Tin easier.

PRICES FOR FUTURE DELIVERY.

New York, Sept. 28.—Options on the wheat market to-day opened active at 1⅛ to 1⅜ higher on exciting news from Chicago. A reaction to the extent of 1 to 1¼ afterwards took place on realisations, and the closing was weak with the break in prices at Chicago, and only ⅜ above yesterday's closing rates.

Sales, futures, 15,144,000 bushels; spot, 69,000 bushels. Receipts, 150,000 bushels; same day last year, 203,717 bushels. Clearances, 30,000 bushels.

Coffee, at the opening, was 25 points up for October delivery, November being 30, and December 20 points up. Early sales resulted for September at 13.25; October, 12.70 to 12.75; November, 12.05; and February, 11.10. A good business resulted in most positions, and the market leaves off steady 10 to 20 points dearer.

Sales, 64,500 bags.

Petroleum Pipe Line Certificates opened firm at 94⅛c, and have received considerable support, closing steady at 94¼c.

Sales, 3,046,000 barrels; pipe-line runs, 47,000 barrels; shipment from regions, 86,000 barrels.

Copper continues firmly held, with, however, little business passing, closing at 17.35 bid for October delivery.

Chicago, Sept. 28.—The excitement on the wheat market here continues, and a large business is being done in futures within a higher range of prices, although a desperate effort to break them has partially succeeded. The market closed easier. September wheat opened at 125, and, after touching 150, closed at 149½. December opened at 99¼, and advanced to 100⅜, but receded to 98⅜ at the close. Grain coming from St. Louis and elsewhere was forwarded by shorts, who were caught in the squeeze.

Receipts, 460,000 bushels; same day last year, 528,302 bushels.

AFFAIRS OF THE PORTE.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]

St. Petersburg, Sept. 28.—The visit of the Grand Dukes Sergius and Paul to Constantinople, and their reception by the Sultan, form the text of an article to-day in the Journal de St. Petersbourg. Quoting the account given of the preparations for the Princes' reception by the Constantinople correspondent of the Correspondance de l'Est, the semi-official organ observes that the cordiality displayed by the Sultan to the august brothers of the Emperor Alexander undoubtedly harmonises with the relations of mutual confidence subsisting between the Governments of the Czar and the Sultan.

Satisfaction is felt in Russia, adds the journal, that the Porte has taken advantage of the visit of the Grand Dukes to bring into prominence the stability and cordiality of these relations, as being incontestably in the interests of universal peace.

Constantinople, Sept. 27, Noon (Delayed in Transmission).—Sir William White, the British Ambassador, was present, as well as the Russian and German Ambassadors, at the banquet given at the Palace last evening in honour of the Russian Imperial guests. The Sultan has conferred upon the Grand Duchess Sergius the Grand Cordon of the Chefakat Order, and upon each of the Grand Dukes the Grand Cordon of the Osmanie set in brilliants.

Constantinople, Sept. 28.—The Italian Government recently notified to the Porte that it would only sign the protocol which it was proposed to append to the Suez Canal Convention, defining the rights of Turkey on the West Coast of the Red Sea, on condition that the Porte should specify the territory it lays claim to in North Africa, and at the same time should mark out the western frontier of Tripoli. The Porte refused to accede to this demand, stating that by compliance with it Turkish rights in Tunis would be compromised, and if it was desired to trace a frontier line on the west of the Ottoman possessions in Africa this would have to be done on the Eastern frontier of Algeria. The Porte has consequently abandoned the idea of a Protocol, and will sign the Suez Canal Convention, despatching at the same time a circular to the Governments of the Powers explaining its own interpretation of Article 10.

Constantinople, Sept. 28 (Later).—The Grand Dukes Sergius and Paul were to-day present at the ceremony of the Selamlik.

This evening they will dine with the Sultan, and will subsequently start for Palestine.

Constantinople, Sept. 28 (Evening).—The reports published by the foreign press regarding the differences created between Turkey and Greece by the seizure of Greek sponge-fishing vessels in the Ægean Sea are declared in official circles here to be greatly exaggerated. It is denied that the Ottoman Representative at Athens has sent a despatch to the Porte stating that the Hellenic Government has given orders for the mobilisation of the fleet, and it is added that such an idea has never been established at Athens. The Porte has sent strict orders to the local authorities at Chios to desist from persecuting the Greek fishermen.

Athens, Sept. 28.—No reply has yet been received by the Greek Government to its last note to the Porte, demanding full satisfaction for the illegal proceedings of the Turkish authorities against Greek vessels engaged in sponge-fishing.

NAVY ESTIMATES.

The fourth report of the Select Parliamentary Committee to examine the Navy Estimates, of which Lord George Hamilton is chairman, has just been issued, although the evidence on which it was based was taken months ago and the conclusions thereon were signed on Aug. 6 last. From this report it appears that "the Navy Estimates, unlike those for the Army, are this year for the first time undergoing detailed examination." The Committee state they have taken evidence on votes involving an expenditure of over seven million sterling, and these are mainly connected with the naval policy of the year, but that it will require further time and evidence before they can complete their task. Meanwhile, they report as follows: That with regard to the responsibility of the members of the Board of Admiralty as to the Estimates and shipbuilding programme more particularly they have examined all the different Naval Lords and others, except Sir William Graham, the late Controller, who is in ill-health, and the Permanent Secretary. The conclusions arrived at are that the First Lord has supreme authority and responsibility, subject only to the Sovereign and Parliament, and that each member of the board is directly responsible to him. Administration is in three main divisions. The personnel, with the movements and condition of fleet, is controlled by the First Lord, assisted by the three Naval Lords, the material by the Controller, and finance by the Parliamentary Secretary. Since his accession to office the First Lord has done much in defining the nature of the duties of the several Lords, but it is still difficult to gather what degree of responsibility attaches to the board as a whole. The First Naval Lord, Admiral Sir Arthur Hood, had stated that the board at large was responsible for the type and design of the various ships which were by direction prepared by the Chief Constructor, and submitted in the first place to the Controller and himself. Subsequently the plans were put before the whole board for approval or rejection. The shipbuilding programme for the year was also discussed and decided on by the full Board. Data as to the condition of the navy and the probable waste and requirements up to 1892 were, however, previously submitted to the First Lord, the First Naval Lord, and the Controller, and from these the programme and estimates for the year were usually framed. "The fact, however, need not be disguised that the first step, which governs the whole proceeding, is the determination by the Minister at the head of the department as representing the Cabinet, of the amount of money to be spent. Expense governs everything"; and the board, Admiral Hood said, try to do their best with the money allowed by Government. The Committee recommend, therefore, that the responsibility of the board and the Government respectively for the efficiency of the navy should be more clearly defined, the wants of the country carefully considered, and a programme submitted to the Cabinet by the First Lord before any decision is taken as to the amount of money to be spent each year. It is intimated, that owing to the limited powers of the members the title of Board of Admiralty tends to mislead the public mind, and that no further change should be made tending to diminish the authority they now exercise.

With regard to the sufficiency of the fleet Admiral Hood wanted six more fast cruisers than are estimated for by 1890, and wished battle-ships to be continued to be built to take the place of obsolete vessels, and more and faster men-of-war in the event of other Powers laying down new ones. Admiral Hoskins advocated going on building until we had a superiority over any two nations combined, and Admiral Hotham, another member of the board, said he was "certainly not" satisfied with the strength of the fleet, for there was a sufficient number neither of battle-ships nor cruisers. With reference to the sea-going and fighting qualities of the "Admiral" class of battle-ships, the "Orlando" type of belted cruisers, the Warspite, Impérieuse, and other vessels of the navy, the immersions of which when launched were much greater than originally designed, this is stated to have been caused by alteration of machinery, armament, guns, and sometimes coal capacity. The Committee state they view with satisfaction a recent circular of the board, which should render such a state of things impossible in future, namely, that, "after a design has been approved, not any alteration or addition either in hull, machinery, armament, &c., shall be permitted without the concurrence of the board." It is finally recommended that as the increased immersion given to the "Admiral" and belted cruiser class of ships only enhances other objections previously taken as to their general faultiness of design, the Admiralty should further investigate the question, and call in outside opinion so as to determine the best means of distributing in future the protective armour of ships. The Admiralty are also advised to thoroughly investigate the subject of establishing a dockyard in India.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN AND THE IRISH PARTY.

Mr. Biggar, M.P., writes: "My attention has been called to the dishonest criticism of the Irish Parliamentary party by Mr. Joseph Chamberlain and others of his type. Mr. Chamberlain, speaking at Nottingham, is reported to have said: 'This is the first time in the history of Ireland—I believe it is the first time in the history of any agitation that has ever called itself patriotic—in which every leader of the agitation from the highest to the lowest has profited by the agitation. The influence of Mr. Parnell at the present moment depends wholly upon the fact that he is the channel through which flow, for the support of the Irish party, the subscriptions from the servant girls of America. The Irish patriotic party is a kept party.' Now, in common with my co-treasurer, Mr. Justin McCarthy, I can give the foregoing an authoritative denial. The greater number of the Irish members have never got any money whatever for their parliamentary services or expenses, and the disbursements made to any of them have been barely sufficient to recoup them for expenses actually incurred in the performance of their onerous duties. I know, perhaps more intimately than anyone alive, the personal affairs of the members of the Irish party, and I say unhesitatingly that I believe each and every one of them has been financially a loser by his connection with parliamentary life, and I know that some have been very heavy sufferers."

School Board Evening Classes.—With reference to the complaints which have been forwarded to the chairman of the London School Board respecting the increase recently made in the fees charged to adults attending the evening classes of the board in the various metropolitan districts, Mr. Spalding (the chairman's secretary) has stated that the alteration is due to a decision resolved upon at the last year's audit of the Local Government Board. It will be remembered that ever since the inauguration of the classes in 1885 adults have been admitted on the same terms as younger scholars, namely 3d per week, or 2s per quarter. On the resumption of the classes this week for the winter term students over twenty-one years of age were informed that in future they would be charged at the rate of 1s per week. The result of this alteration of fees is that large numbers of men, who belong to the labouring classes and cannot afford to pay the additional ninepence a week, are deprived of the advantages offered by the schools. The board wish it to be understood that they are in nowise responsible for the change, since the auditor, who was previous to this year ignorant of the amount contributed by adults towards the expenses of the schools, has decreed that they must now be excluded from the classes, or else pay the full cost of the education which they receive, that cost being estimated at 1s per week. The auditor explained his action by stating that the Education Act did not empower school boards to provide education for adults. The board has made more than one effort to put pressure on the Local Government Board not to be so rigid in their interpretation of the statute, but the auditor's decision has been confirmed by the Local Government board.

The Navy.—The Cockatrice, which was recommissioned at Malta in December, 1885, is to be recommissioned there for a further term of service on the Mediterranean station. THE WHITECHAPEL MURDERS.

WAS THE ASSASSIN AN ANATOMIST?

Assurances have been given by responsible officers of the medical schools attached to all the great London hospitals, with two exceptions, that no such extraordinary application was ever made to them of the nature described by Mr. Wynne Baxter, the coroner, in his recent summing up. At the schools of the University College Hospital and of the Middlesex Hospital the authorities, for some inscrutable reason, decline to give any information as to whether the "American student" did prefer his singular request to them or not. From certain admissions of the gentlemen concerned there does not appear to be reason to doubt that to one or other of these two institutions belongs the distinction of having given certain information to the coroner, which he subsequently communicated to the Scotland-yard detectives, and upon which he based the theory which has caused such consternation. He assumed that some abandoned wretch had been incited by the knowledge that a demand existed, and that the criminal must have been some one accustomed to the post-mortem room, and possessed of sufficient knowledge of anatomy to enable him to perform an unusual operation under harassing conditions. After Mr. Baxter had insisted that Mr. Phillips, the police divisional surgeon, should no longer withhold the most important part of his evidence respecting his post-mortem examination of the body of Annie Chapman, and when the report was published, it is clear that on the next day the coroner received a communication from an official connected with a leading London hospital, and that in consequence he attended at the pathological museum belonging to the institution, where some one—not the "sub-curator," for the post that gentleman holds is otherwise described—made him acquainted with the outlines of a rumour which had circulated in the dissecting-rooms during the past summer, and to which not the slightest importance was attached until the murder in Hanbury-street occurred, and the startling medical evidence was published. The rumour, at most, appears to have been an idle one, and in respect of the sum mentioned to the coroner—viz., £20—as the price offered, and the object of the American, as stated by him, the story is discredited. At the Middlesex Hospital the official who, on other points, refused to elucidate the matter, characterised the tale, as far as the above details are concerned, as a silly story. Furthermore, at University College, where pains were taken to return an unqualified answer of "no information," it was hinted that the story as it has been made public had, in some way, become mixed with error, and that it was very certain that it provided no explanation of the motive of the crime. Under these circumstances, when the true facts are deliberately withheld by the persons who are responsible for the allegations which have created general alarm, the public have a right to know what is the origin of the story, and upon what foundation this piece of sensationalism rests. The coroner surely could not have imagined the particulars of the incident, or was he misled, intentionally or purposely, by any responsible authority? Those gentlemen who assert that they have "no information," somewhat indignantly repudiate the suggestion that it was a hoax, or that the matter has no importance. In fact, they talk somewhat mysteriously about "the interests of justice" being imperilled by disclosure. Whether the real object is to prolong public excitement, or for some other reasons the persons who could set the whole affair at rest are making a sham mystery of it, it is seriously discreditable to the authorities who indulge in want of candour, and it is opposed to the interests of the public and of the police. It is difficult to understand why they should give the coroner information, who considered that it should be made public in order to detect the criminal, and then refrain, possibly for some reason of pique, from telling the public the truth. There is nothing in the matter which reflects upon the character of the management of medical schools; the only discredit falls upon people who create, or at any rate sustain, apparently false alarms. In general, skilled anatomists agree that the incident, as at present narrated, is ridiculous, and not worthy of serious consideration. It is admitted that, if the published details be correct, the murderer must have been a more or less practised anatomist; but it is pointed out that this idea depends entirely upon the fact whether great skill was displayed. The evidence at the inquest was to that effect, but professional men and eminent demonstrators in medical schools are now saying that they would be much more satisfied on that head had there been a second medical opinion at the inquest to confirm Mr. Phillips' evidence. Had that precaution been taken, it could never have been questioned whether the operation was so successful as has been alleged. Why did the police neglect this simple measure, when they had the resources of the Government at their disposal?

John Fitzgerald, who was arrested at Wandsworth, and who has been detained at the Leman-street Police-station, on his own confession, of having murdered Annie Chapman, in Hanbury-street, on the 8th inst., has been liberated, exhaustive inquiries having proved his statement entirely unfounded.

PURE COFFEE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Sir—The article in your issue of to-day, in which you refer in your usual well-chosen language to the coffee to be met with in England and other countries, has interested me much. In my business capacity I may, without breach of confidence, say that the public have little idea of the gross frauds which are perpetrated with this (when pure) delicious beverage.

I have before me as I write a tin bearing in large letters the inscription, "Best ground coffee," and in somewhat smaller type, "this coffee is warranted pure, freshly roasted, and ground and packed" by ——. I purposely refrain from giving the name. The sample in question, I may state without hesitation, consists to a large extent of chicory and sugar finings, and the firm in question are undoubtedly liable under the Adulteration Act. To sell the usual mixture—generally called French coffee—which not unfrequently contains 50 to 60 per cent. of chicory, is bad enough, but the case I have mentioned is far more flagrant. Reference to the various mixtures which have been brought under my notice would occupy too much of your space, but I cannot help saying that the way the public are cheated in this article, even in this highly civilised and moral country—possessing, moreover, a very fair Act for the prevention of such frauds—is nothing more nor less than monstrous. The public have the remedy in their own hands, and may readily obtain a pure article if they will only purchase freshly-roasted whole coffee and grind it themselves.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

H. S. CARPENTER, F.I.C., F.C.S., Member of the Society of Public Analysts, &c.

THE AFRICAN SLAVE TRADE.

In reply to a correspondent at Ayr, Mr. Chamberlain states that he has no doubt the only effective remedy for slavery is to be found in the spread of legitimate commerce, enabling the people to secure subsistence by the production and transport of ordinary articles of trade. With the advance of civilisation and the introduction of Europeans, progress in this direction will be hastened and slavery is likely to disappear. The effect of the great extension of British influence in Africa is certain, in Mr. Chamberlain's opinion, at no distant date to put an end entirely to the slave trade, which still exists in so great a part of the Dark Continent.

Sir James Ferguson writes that it is not believed there has been any considerable increase in the slave trade, but there has been shifting of its area to the region of the Lakes. The new Sultan of Zanzibar had done all in his power to discourage his subjects from engaging in the slave trade, and the European Powers were co-operating for its repression. The policy of the British Government was to establish powerful trading companies, whose competition would ultimately exclude persons dependent upon slave carriage.

The New Sheriffs.—Yesterday Mr. Alderman Edward James Gray and Mr. Alfred James Newton, who were elected by the Livery of the City of London at Midsummer last as Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, were formally admitted into office at the Guildhall, in succession to Major Davies and Mr. W. A. Higgs. In view of the Local Government Act, they will be the last Sheriffs of London and Middlesex elected by the Livery. In future, a sheriff will be appointed by the Crown for the county of London, and one also for that part of the county of Middlesex outside the Metropolis. The two sheriffs of the City will henceforward have no jurisdiction outside the City. The procession of the new sheriffs comprised the band of the Postal and Telegraph Service, commissionaires bearing banners, carriages containing the masters of the Gold and Silver Wire Drawers, Framework Knitters, Glovers, Spectacle Makers, Shipwrights, Lorriners, Turners, Bakers, Fanmakers, and Clothmakers' Companies, to which guilds the sheriffs belong, the band of the Tower Hamlets Engineers, the City Trumpeters, the new under-sheriffs, and, finally, the sheriffs in their equipages. On their arrival at the Guildhall, whither the Lord Mayor and the retiring sheriffs had preceded them, they were escorted first to the aldermen's chamber, where they were introduced to the Court, and thence to the dais in the great hall, where the ceremony of investiture was gone through. The new sheriffs entertained a large company at lunch in the Clothworkers' Hall.

Education.—Intelligent Boys From all Parts of the World Ought to Study in England, France, and Germany under "Hayman's International System," which guarantees to all intelligent pupils a thorough Commercial or Professional Education, and also enables them (if desirous) to perfect Conversational French and German in France and Germany under Mr. Hayman's special care and supervision. 1. Pupils can either study entirely at Finchley-road, London, or may go at any time for short or long periods to France or Germany, without any extra charge, trouble, or anxiety to parents. 2. A sound and practical education thus obtained in England, France, and Germany at exactly the same cost as in England alone. 3. In Paris schools there are ten French pupils to one English; progress has, therefore, always been very rapid and satisfactory. 4. At Boulogne (only 3½ hours from London), good sea bathing. 5. Preparation for University, Commercial, Legal, and Med. Exams. Entire care of youths from Spain, India, America, Colonies. Ages of pupils 7 to 18. Inclusive terms. On receipt [illegible]. Pupils are also received for France or Germany only.—Address Secretary, International College, Finchley-road, London.—[Advt.]

MODERN PULPIT ORATORY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Sir—The truth of the matter is that many of the exponents of the Gospel of Christ do not believe the truths they enunciate, and their hearts are not in the work. It is notorious that numbers enter the "Church" for just the same reason they would enter the legal or medical professions—as a means of livelihood, and because it is "respectable," and it is clear that these do not believe the truths of the Gospel. It is a well-known fact that the late Bishop Hannington was converted some time after his ordination, and how many other instances might be quoted?

If we want inspired preachers it must be insisted upon that every man offering himself for training as an "Ambassador of Christ" shall adduce satisfactory evidence that he himself has realised the truth of that Gospel "which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."—Yours truly,

T. E. WHITE, Hon. Sec. Kilburn and St. John's-wood Auxiliary of the "London Open Air Mission."

2, Circus-road, St. John's-wood, N.W., Sept. 28.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Sir—There appears to me to be a fallacy running through nearly all the letters which have appeared in your columns on the above subject. It is taken for granted that the primary function of the preacher is to deliver eloquent orations on religious topics. Now, in opposition to this view, I would respectfully suggest that the first business of the minister is to teach his people, and by means of the truth taught to lead them to goodness of life. The one great text-book is the Bible. It is not a dead book. We have not exhausted its contents, nor mastered its manifold applications of truth to life—whether it be the inner life of the soul or the outer life of the world. Our aim, therefore, should be not to air our own eloquence, but to expound the Scriptures. And the plainer and simpler the language used the more effective will the teaching be. The Bible is full of dark sayings. Its meaning at times is hidden by the most singular clothing of parable and metaphor. The Psalms and Apocalypse are a striking example of this. It is the function of the teacher to discover and to give to his people as interestingly as he can the truth embedded in this marvellous Divine Word. As matter of fact most modern preachers adopt a text merely as a motto to an elaborate essay.

Teaching from the pulpit, then, under the form of expository preaching, I take to be the great want of the ministry of to-day.—I remain, yours, &c.,

(REV.) PETER RAMAGE.

The Manse, Radcliffe, Sept. 28.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Sir—It will be within the recollection of many that the matter of services was brought before our legislature some years ago, and that the discussion happily resulted, in the year 1872, in an Act being passed (35 and 36 Vict., c. 35, "for the amendment of the Act of Uniformity"), which authorises a sermon to be preached without the prayers and services being previously read. It also authorises the use as separate services of the Morning Prayer, the Litany, and the Holy Communion, theretofore, and, strange to say, still continued to be, used as one jumbled service. This may be, in a measure, accounted for by the circumstance of the clergy (themselves a Conservative body) being fearful to discompose or offend their "flocks" by departing from the old régime. Am I over sanguine in supposing that if this Act were more generally acted upon many metropolitan churches would be better attended than they now are? I am, of course, not alluding to the churches of popular preachers, or to those where ritualistic music is predominant.

I would furthermore urge the subdivision of the service contemplated by the Act as a means of removing the innumerable repetitions which necessarily result from the irrational and fatiguing conjunction of three services originally intended to be distinct. I may also allude to the very convenient course adopted at Whippingham Church, in the Isle of Wight, where an interval is arranged between the conclusion of the service of prayer and the commencement of the sermon, signified, I believe, externally by the tolling of a bell.—I am, Sir, yours truly,

JOHN WALTER WATSON.

GYMNASTICS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Sir—As representing the oldest gymnastic club in the East-end of London, may I be permitted to entirely endorse what Mr. Macqueen has stated in the letter of your to-day's issue. I must preface what I have to say by stating that the Orion was established in 1868, and now has a membership of between 400 and 500 members. The refutation of Mons. Daryll's statements in detail has already been accomplished by the very interesting leader in your issue of the 18th inst., but the fact of the Orion being situated in the centre of a neighbourhood literally teeming with clubs for every form of out-of-door sports enables me to state, with some degree of authority, what value is placed by out-of-door athletes as a body upon systematic exercise such as is to be obtained only in a well-appointed gymnasium. So far from methodical exercise counting for nothing amongst them, it is now an acknowledged fact that the man who is a regular attendant at a gymnasium is the better developed man, his development being harmonious and symmetrical as distinguished from the one-sided results obtained by the exclusive following of any one of our outdoor sports. To such an extent is this recognised that large numbers habitually attend during the winter months at various gymnasia solely to counteract the results following from a season's devotion to any one form of outdoor sport.

It is impossible to overrate the benefit to the community by the voluntary submission to the discipline exacted from the members of all well-regulated gymnasia, and of the value of the feeling of esprit de corps resulting from men working continually under leaders they have themselves chosen. Dealing, as we often have to, with youngsters who have just escaped from the schoolmaster's control, and filled with exuberant animal spirits, this discipline acts as a most salutary check, and by investing them with a part of the responsibility of preserving their club's prestige, awakens a train of thoughtfulness which often saves them from participating in many a foolish escapade. It is those gymnastic clubs which observe the strictest discipline and are most methodical in work that are most successful; and by success is not meant the production of merely clever gymnasts—although this result also ensues—but the highest general state of efficiency and all-round improvement in the health and physique of its members as a body.

Dealing with our schools, the want, and therefore the value, of methodical and graduated exercise is proved by the physically lamentable condition of many of the boys on leaving school. Except at our first-class and most expensive schools, little or no attention is given to the physical education and development of our boys, and, beyond a weekly drill by an old army man, who is generally uneducated and quite unfitted to have charge of growing lads, nothing whatever is done by a systematic or graduated nature. How much can be done to remedy this has been shown by the boys' classes held at this gymnasium, the improvement in the health and appearance of the youngsters being noticeable within a short time of their joining the class.

In the practice of gymnastics one danger is to be borne in mind. It is that of having ill-trained and inexperienced instructors, and the present efforts of every church, chapel, and mutual improvement society to add a gymnasium to its attractions cannot but be viewed with alarm by those of us who know that the mere purchase of apparatus does not constitute a gymnasium. To obviate this will be the work of the Amateur Gymnastic Association, which is now taking steps for the examination of gymnastic instructors and the issuing of certificates to properly qualified men—a work which must be eventually taken in hand by the Government, as has been done with intellectual education, and as Germany has long since done by the institution of colleges for the preparation of gymnastic instructors. From an experience of some seventeen years in gymnasium work I am so convinced of its value as to add to Mons. Daryll's quotation of Wellington's words that England's battles were won in the playgrounds of Eton, by saying that Germany attained hers in her gymnasia.

I trust others will bear their testimony to the general utility of gymnastics, and that by opening the columns of The Daily Telegraph to a discussion of the question, you will lend your powerful aid in directing attention to the value and necessity of what, especially in large towns, becomes each year an increasing factor in the health of our nation.—I am, Sir, yours truly,

A. BARNARD, Captain Orion Gymnastic Club.

Casterton-street, Mare-street, Hackney, E., Sept. 28.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Sir—Mr. Macqueen's letter in your issue of to-day will, I trust, do much to render gymnastics more popular. A long experience has convinced me that gymnastics, as practised in a properly-conducted gymnasium, is by far the best (one might almost say only) means of thoroughly developing the physical system. And there is so much in gymnastics that is specially commendable. Its effect is certain, it is comparatively free from danger, and is suited to the weakest constitution. I am prepared to say, and without any attempt at hyperbole, that with our present gymnastic system, there is absolutely no reason why a weak, undeveloped youth should grow into decrepit manhood. No matter how delicate a young man may be, provided he has no actual deformity or disease, a course of gymnastic training, such indeed as he would receive in any gymnasium conducted on the principles recommended by the Amateur Gymnastic Association, will convert him into a strong man if not an absolute athlete. There are some precautions he must observe. For instance, he must guard against taking cold, and over-exertion at first; and he must not endeavour to emulate the feats of advanced gymnasts.

I speak confidently on this subject, because I have had so much actual proof of the truth of what I am saying. I have seen many youths, who on joining the gymnasium were hollow-chested, muscleless, weak, puny fellows, become in a season or two quite presentable specimens of physical development. Some who came to us a few years back in the same condition are now first-class athletes and splendid examples of physical perfection. I have in my mind several typical cases, and I much regret I cannot give actual measurements to bear out my statements. Could I place the figures before you the results would be very striking.

Therefore I am very confident when I declare that there is absolutely no reason why a delicate and undeveloped youth should not become a man of good physical calibre, provided he can become a member of a good gymnasium.

Gymnasia are springing up all over the country, and in London the sport is growing very rapidly. The result of this upon the physical condition of the rising generation must soon be beneficially felt, and those who wish to see Englishmen a race of strong, "manly" men should do what they can to promote the welfare of gymnastic clubs.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

H. J. ASHCROFT, Captain Stepney Gymnasium.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MANSION HOUSE.—Kleptomania.—Amy May, a stylishly-dressed Frenchwoman, was charged on remand with shoplifting.—It was shown that the prisoner on the 21st inst. entered the shop of Mr. Whales, of Ludgate-hill, and asked to look at some jewellery. She made some small purchases, and after she had left a diamond and sapphire ring and a steel hair ornament were missed. When arrested she threw the articles away.—Fred Bateman, an optician, of the Strand, deposed that on the 20th inst. the prisoner asked to look at some opera-glasses. After she had left he missed a pair valued at £3 15s.—Mr. Grain, who defended, said that the prisoner was highly connected, her relatives being very wealthy persons, whilst she herself had ample means. There was, therefore, no necessity for her to steal in order that she might procure money. She had undergone a very severe operation, and that had undermined her health, and produced violent fits of hysteria. He would not say she was not responsible in the eye of the law, but it was clear that her illness had led to her not being at times answerable for her actions.—Mr. Whales was willing, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, to withdraw the charge if the Court would allow it. The second charge had come before them unexpectedly, but no doubt the alderman in respect of that also would permit the same course to be pursued.—Alderman Cowan said that he felt constrained to send the case before a jury, and he would allow bail.—Major Storey and the Rev. Mr. Dillon were accordingly bound over to produce the defendant for trial.

BOW-STREET.—The Fatal Struggle in Clare-market.—Wm. Dowden, 24, who appeared to be in great distress of mind, was accused of causing the death of George Best.—Mr. J. T. Moss defended the prisoner; and Detective-Sergeant Partridge had charge of the case for the police.—Mrs. Maria Watkins, living at 62, Stanhope-street, Clare-market, said that on the previous evening she was standing at her street-door, talking to a lodger. It was then about six o'clock. The defendant came out of his house and met Best, who was the worse for drink. The latter pushed against him, and then proceeded to abuse Mrs. Dowden, who was sitting at her window. He used shocking language, and on the prisoner expostulating raised his hand. The accused, in defending himself, seemed to push the deceased, who fell with his head on the kerbstone. The witness helped to pick him up, but he was quite black in the face and insensible. He was taken to the hospital, where it was found he was dead.—This evidence was corroborated by T. Hewitt.—Both witnesses expressed their conviction that the fatality was purely accidental.—Sergeant Partridge said he was given to understand that this was so, and Dowden was then remanded, bail for his reappearance being taken in two sureties in £20.

WESTMINSTER.—The Police and the Public.—James Henderson, cab proprietor and driver, of 7, Ellis-mews, Walham-green, surrendered to his recognisances before Mr. Partridge, to answer a charge of being drunk during his employment at Sloane-square on Monday night.—Mr. Rymer defended.—The evidence of two constables was to the effect that the defendant, ignoring the traffic regulations made on the occasion of the opening of the Court Theatre, forced his cab to a public-house, remarking that he would get through, and that none of Charley Warren's bull-dogs would stop him.—A constable who seized his horse's head, and another officer who corroborated, stated that when he got off the box he was very drunk and staggering about, also that he was exceedingly violent on the way to the station.—In cross-examination the constables admitted that it was not noticeable that the defendant was drunk until he got off his box, and that he displayed great anxiety about his horse, which was said to be an entire animal; further, that the defendant denied being drunk at the station.—Inspector Fielding, B Division, Gerald-road Station, Pimlico, said that when the accused was brought in to be charged, about half-past eleven at night, he was decidedly drunk.—Cross-examined: Two gentlemen came to the station about twenty minutes afterwards, and one of them, who said that the prisoner had driven him, requested that a doctor might be sent for. As the cabman himself had not asked for the attendance of a medical man he declined to accede to the request, and also to allow of any communication, verbal or in writing, with the accused. He (witness) recognised the gentleman in court, Count Stenbock. The Count said that he sent the cabman for some brandy and to get change, but was himself very excited, threatening to write to the newspapers.—Mr. Rymer: You treated both the Count and his friend in a very off-hand way.—Witness: I did not. And, in my opinion, they were not so sober as they are to-day in court.—Mr. Rymer: Now, that is a very nasty suggestion.—Witness said he directed them to leave the station, and they went.—By the Magistrate: Having no doubt about the cabman's drunkenness himself, he did not think it necessary to send for a doctor twenty minutes after the man had been charged, at the request of a third person.—Mr. Rymer: The cabman had not got 7s 6d to pay for the doctor's fee, and no one was allowed to speak to him or even send a note to him.—Mr. Partridge: I think as far as the doctor goes there was an error of judgment on the part of the inspector. If the defendant's friends desire a medical man to be called and offer to bear the expense there should be no objection.—Mr. Rymer said his defence was that Henderson was sober. Unfortunately, as it turned out for him, when he was summoned at this court a short time ago for leaving his cab unattended and was only mulcted in the costs of the summons, an intimation was thrown out that he would soon be there again, a prediction which had been verified.—Mr. Partridge: Are you going to prove that, because, if not, the statement is irregular?—Mr. Rymer said it could be proved if necessary.—Count Stanislas Eric Stenbock, residing at 11, Sloane-terrace, Chelsea, deposed that the defendant had been in the habit of driving him daily, and on the night in question he drove witness home from the Solferino Restaurant, Rupert-street, about eleven o'clock. He asked the accused to get change at a neighbouring public-house, and to purchase some brandy. Henderson was perfectly sober at this time, and directly witness heard he was locked up he proceeded to the station. The inspector there was grossly uncivil, refused to allow him to communicate with the accused, or even to take to him a card, on which the mere announcement was made that he (witness) would see that the cab was sent home, and that defendant's wife was informed of what had occurred. A doctor was also refused, for which witness offered to pay.—Mr. Rymer: It has been kindly suggested that you, Count, were under the influence of drink.—Witness: It is most absolutely false. I was angry, and might have been flushed in consequence.—In answer to questions from the magistrate witness said that Henderson was really a friend of his whom he had known at Oxford in different circumstances.—Mr. Francis James Carroll, who gave the address 20, Powis-square, Brighton, said that he accompanied Count Stenbock to the police-station, and could corroborate his statement.—Having heard other witnesses, Mr. Partridge considered that he could not convict the defendant of drunkenness in the face of the evidence, particularly as it had been admitted that the man's condition was such that while he sat on the box of his cab he would not have been apprehended. The inspector no doubt committed an error of judgment in not sending for a doctor; he might have acted a little more judiciously, especially after the declaration of the two witnesses for the accused. He (the magistrate) should be obliged to dismiss the charge as it stood, but he thought the defendant, in obstructing the police and defying their regulations, had been guilty of very gross misbehaviour, and for that he should suggest that a summons be taken out.

CLERKENWELL.—The Alleged Murder at Canonbury.—Henry Glennie, 24, a hot-water fitter, giving no address, was again brought up and remanded on the charge of having been concerned, with other persons not in custody, in murdering Frances Maria Wright, aged 71, at No. 19, Canonbury-terrace, Islington, on May 16 last.—Some formal evidence was given.

WORSHIP-STREET.—Cruelty to a Daughter.—John Enright, 32, calling himself a labourer, was charged on a summons with having assaulted his daughter, Ellen Enright, aged nine.—The girl, who presented a pitiable appearance, and had a black eye, was last week brought before the Court, charged with wandering in Commercial-street, Spitalfields.—Mr. Hiscox, School Board officer for the district, said that he had for some time had the child under observation, and charged her, with a view of getting her removed to a school. Her parents lived in a wretched house in Thrawl-street, Spitalfields, and sent her out, ostensibly to sell flowers in the streets, but really to beg. If she did not get what her father considered enough money he thrashed her with his fists. The child also informed the magistrate (Mr. Montagu Williams, Q.C.) that her father gave her the black eye because she only took home 1d. Thereupon Mr. Williams remarked that he would put a stop to such horrible brutality, and ordered a summons to be served on the father. Hence the present charge. The girl now said that her father always beat her with his fists. He punched her in the eye and knocked her down. She denied his suggestion that he fell over a barrow and knocked her face against the dustbin in the yard.—A witness was called to support this contention, but the police-constable said that he had heard the father threaten the girl and his wife as well.—Mr. Montagu Williams believed the child, and sentenced the father to two months' hard labour.—The girl, on the application of the School Board officer, was sent to Mill-hill Industrial School till sixteen years old.

A Smart Child.—Henry Franklin, 58, described as a tramp, with no fixed abode, was accused of having stolen a child named Louise Rosenthal, aged three years, with intent to deprive its parents of the care and guardianship. The father and mother live in Paternoster-court, Spitalfields, and the child was put out to play in front of the door by the mother on Thursday, and was subsequently missed. At about one o'clock two girls, named Minnie Egan and Clara Kelly, aged about ten and twelve respectively, were in the High-street, Aldgate, and saw the prisoner leading the infant in the direction of Leadenhall-market. The girls knew the child, though not its name, and tried to get it from the prisoner, but he would not let it go to them. They followed him to Leadenhall Market, a distance of half a mile, and saw him carry the little one into a coffee shop there. "Then," said Clara, "I got a crowd around and told them, and when the prisoner came out I gave him in charge, because I thought he wanted to steal the child."—The magistrate told her she had behaved very well.—A police-constable of the City Force said that when he heard the girl's story he questioned the prisoner, who said he knew the child's father and mother, and often took it for a walk. This was denied by the parents.—The magistrate said it was a strange affair, because it was not clear what the defendant could have done with such an infant. A jury, however, would have to determine the matter, and he fully committed the prisoner for trial at the Middlesex Sessions.

DALSTON.—A Fresh Whitechapel Scare.—James Johnson, a pale-looking man of 35, with a decided American accent, describing himself as a waiter, of Birdhurst-road, St. John's-hill, Wandsworth, was charged before Mr. R. W. Bros with assaulting Elizabeth Hudson, a woman of loose character, by throwing her down on the pavement, and threatening to stab her with a knife. The story told by prosecutrix and her friend, Alice Anderson, was that at two o'clock in the morning she was at the corner of Richmond-road, Dalston, when the prisoner came up, threw her down, and at the same time pulled from his coat pocket a long knife, and tried to stab her. She screamed "Murder," and he ran away.—Mr. Bros: How did he open the knife?—Witness: It was open, and had a sharp point.—Mr. Bros: Where did he take it from?—Witness: His outside coat pocket. It was something like a carving knife.—By the Prisoner: I did not put my hand in your pocket. You seized me and threw me down, without saying a word.—Alice Anderson added that the prisoner had previously accosted her in the Kingsland-road. It was near the Lamb public-house. As they were going along he tried to throw her down. She screamed, and the man ran away.—Police-constable 460 T said: About a quarter to two this morning I was on duty in De Beauvoir-square, when I heard screams of "Police" and "Stop him." I turned round and saw prisoner running along the road. I stopped him and asked what was the matter? He said two women had stopped him in the Kingsland-road, and wanted him to go down the mews with them, and because he refused they screamed, and he ran away. I took him back to Kingsland-road, where I saw the women. Hudson said, "That is the man who tried to stab me." She said she would charge him. I took him to the station.—Mr. Bros: Did you search him?—Witness: Yes.—Mr. Bros: Did you find a knife?—Witness: No, sir.—Prisoner (in reply to the magistrate) said: I have no witness to bring. Everything the females have said is entirely the other way about. They used dirty, insulting language to me. If they had not spoken to me I should not have said anything to them. I spoke to them going along. One of them put her hand into my pocket, and I gave her a shove and she went down. She was so drunk she did not want much force. There is nothing against my character, but I asked the police not to make inquiries because my wife is so delicate. I have never been in a court of justice before in my life. I work for my living. I had no knife in my possession. I never carry one.—Mr. Bros: You will be put back for inquiries, and can communicate with whom you please.—Subsequently the prisoner was again placed in the dock, and Mrs. Seaton, his landlady, deposed that she had known him as a respectable man for a long time. He was employed by refreshment contractors. When prisoner was called for what he had to say he said he could only repeat his former statement, with the addition that he came over to Kingsland to see a friend, and not finding him, he went playing billiards.—Mr. Bros: Why did you run away?—Prisoner: Because I was ashamed of being mixed up in such a matter.—Police-constable 16 JR said he knew the prosecutrix in this case as a disorderly woman, and had cautioned her not long before this matter occurred for accosting men.—Mr. Bros discharged the prisoner, remarking that he had got into an awkward scrape by his own folly.

In reference to this case the police state that they noticed, as an extraordinary circumstance, that when they went on duty last night they saw a very long chalk mark on the pavement in Kingsland-road, one directing point coming to the word "Look!" and, farther on, "I am Leather Apron. Five more and I will give myself up." Beneath this was a rude drawing of a man with a knife uplifted towards a woman.

THE SPORTING LADY AND HER CHAMPION.

At Westminster Police-court, yesterday, Joseph Knott, 32, giving an address in Westminster, where he has not resided for the last four months, was charged before Mr. Partridge with being concerned, with a man not in custody, in robbing Mr. John Hawker, gentleman, of 22, St. George's-place, Hyde Park-corner, of a gold lever watch and locket, small diamond horse-shoe pin, and an umbrella, value £25, at Lower Belgrave-street, Eaton-square, on July 18.

The prosecutor stated that he was of independent means. On July 17 last he was in the neighbourhood of Victoria Station, standing in a doorway out of the rain, when he got into conversation with a young lady about her betting transactions, and particularly as to her having been induced by a postman to part with her money to a person who, introduced as a bookmaker and "a great fool with his money," accommodatingly took a bet on "a certain winner"—the race having been run at the time. The girl told him that she was waiting for the money she had been swindled out of, and witness, with a view of helping her, made an appointment to meet her again the following day and look out for the postman. Accordingly on the evening of July 18 he was in her company in the Buckingham Palace-road. The postman, a man named Davis, who was employed at the Buckingham-gate District Office, came up, but the accused and another man were in his company. Prisoner pretended that the girl owed them money for betting, and asked witness if he would pay a bet she had lost. The postman stood by and listened. He (Mr. Hawker) said he never gambled, and, though he had taken up the young lady's case, he did not see why he should be asked to pay anything. Seeing the position he was in, and that he had apparently fallen into a trap, he expressed his sorrow at having spoken to the men, and invited them to have a friendly drink, observing that perhaps their statements were as reliable as the girl's, and he would take no further trouble on her behalf. They then adjourned to a public-house, and he treated the party, remaining with them about three-quarters of an hour. He left them with all his property safe, and, unaware that he was followed, proceeded on his way through Lower Belgrave-street alone. He entered another public-house to have a glass of beer, and he was therefore surprised when the postman and the other men came in to be treated again. On that occasion witness called for a small glass of rum; but, after tasting it, a "curious" feeling came over him, and he did not empty the glass. He left the public-house at once by himself, but had gone a hundred yards or so on his way when he was brutally attacked, one man violently pushing him headlong down some circular stone steps into an area. Knott and a one-eyed man were his assailants, and, when he was incapable of resistance from the injuries he had received, his pockets were rifled. The man not in custody held him while the prisoner snatched his watch, worth £20, from his chain, and took his scarf pin. Both men then ran up the steps and disappeared. When witness recovered he made his way back to the public-house and told the landlord he had been robbed.—Cross-examined by the prisoner, the prosecutor said the young woman followed on to the second public-house, but she did not go inside. At her request he certainly did say, contrary to the fact, that she was his sister.—Arthur Roxbury, a shoeblack at Victoria Station, deposed that on the night of July 18 he saw Mr. Hawker and the young woman who had been referred to. When the postman came up the defendant and two other men, known as hangers about the station, followed close behind. The men referred to closed round the prosecutor—one on the right, one on the left, and one behind—and escorted him along the Buckingham Palace-road.

Constable Smith, 250 B, said he arrested Knott on Thursday night, in Vauxhall. Witness knew that the prisoner used to be a loiterer about Victoria, and he was an associate of thieves. The one-eyed man, who had not been arrested, was also of notorious bad character.

By Mr. Partridge: The postman is no longer in the service of the Post Office, and I do not know where he has gone.

Mr. Partridge remanded the defendant in custody, so that the police might endeavour to make further arrests.

"DAILY TELEGRAPH" WEATHER OBSERVATIONS.

LATEST INDICATIONS.

"DAILY TELEGRAPH" OFFICE, SATURDAY (2 A.M.)

Bar.	Therm.	Wind.	Weather.
29·86 Falling.	64°	S.E. Fresh.	Cloudy.

Our correspondents forward the following latest telegraphic reports:

Brighton.—Bar. 30·05, falling; wind S.E.; cloudy day; heavy rain at night.
Bristol.—Bar. 29·95, falling; wind S., light; fine, after slight rain.
Cork.—Bar. 29·82, steady; wind N.W.; cloudy, warm.
Eastbourne.—Bar. 29·940, falling; therm. 52°; calm, overcast, showery.
Kirkwall (Orkney).—Bar. 30·04, falling; therm. 49°; calm, overcast, sky foggy.
Paris.—Bar. 30·19; therm. at noon, 68°; very fine.
Folkestone (9 p.m.).—Bar. 30·0, falling; calm, overcast; smooth passage across Channel.
Prawle Point (6.30 p.m.)—Wind S.W., light; thick fog.
Dover.—Bar. 29·93, falling; wind S.W., light; fine day, overcast to-night; sea smooth; steamers had good passages.

According to the meteorological reports the changes of pressure now in progress are of a very undecided character, so that variable weather—rain at times, with some bright intervals—seems likely to be prevalent. A general fall in the barometer has set in.

Elopement at Dover.—At Dover yesterday an engineer, named Alfred George Jones, and a woman named Martha Calcraft, both of them married, were again severally charged with stealing and receiving from Miss Robina Anderson the sum of £69 and a gold chain. Miss Anderson was a governess out of a situation, and she went to reside with Mr. and Mrs. Jones. She withdrew £72 from the Post Office Savings Bank with the object of taking a business. Jones abstracted from her room a bag containing £69 in gold and notes, and a few days after he disappeared from Dover. The female prisoner appears to have accompanied him, and when arrested she had some of the notes upon her, which she admitted he gave her. She was also wearing the chain. Jones now alleged that Miss Anderson withdrew the money with the object of eloping with him, and gave it to him for that purpose. Arrangements were made for the elopement, but he did not go, and he supposed, because he had not eloped with her, she was venting her spite on him. The prosecutrix was cross-examined at great length by the solicitor who represented Mrs. Calcraft. She admitted that she had walked out with Mr. Jones alone, and had been on very intimate terms with him. He had kissed her when he said "good bye." When she went to live at his house both he and his wife used to kiss her when she said "Good night." On one occasion he gave her a wedding ring and keeper, and said, "We will elope," to which she replied, "Indeed we will not." She did not tell Mrs. Jones about the proposition. She did not sell the rings till Jones had left his home. Both prisoners were committed for trial.

Wreck off the Cornish Coast.—Telegrams from the Lizard signal station yesterday morning state that the schooner Arab, of Dublin, bound from Swansea to Poole, laden with coal, has gone ashore at Polpeor Cove, and has been abandoned by her crew. She has lost her bulwarks, and has sails set. The sea is making a clean breach over her, and from all appearances she will be a total wreck. The crew—six in number, including the master—landed in their own boat at Carleon Cove, eastward of Cadgwith. They are all now at the Lizard. The vessel struck the rocks at 3.30 a.m., during a dense fog. The crew have lost all their effects.

CARINA.—Mr. DURWARD LELY as DON FELIX.—The Pall Mall Gazette says: "Mr. Durward Lely—one of our best operatic tenors—played the leading part. He is an old favourite of London playgoers, who will be inclined to apply to him two lines of the ballad he renders so effectively, and say that . . . 'Still in memory lingers long, The voice we love so well.'"

CARINA.—Mr. DURWARD LELY as DON FELIX. The Standard says: "Mr. Durward Lely as the hero acted and sang with remarkable spirit."

CARINA.—Mr. DURWARD LELY as DON FELIX.—The Evening News says: "The ballad for the tenor, 'The Halls of Memory,' is a particularly pretty number, and was sung with admirable taste by Mr. Durward Lely."

CARINA.—The St. James's Gazette says: "The Opera Comique opened last night with brilliant success. Gay surroundings count for something, and the new decorations of the theatre, at once tasteful and striking, may well have predisposed the audience for the favourable view which they at once took of 'Carina,' the opera of the evening. But that work made at the earliest opportunity its own mark, and piece after piece in the first act was applauded to the echo."

D. Ward hits off to the life; three lunatics of the farcical order (Messrs. C. Collette, Guise, and Eric Thorne), whose clever fooling raised hearty laughter; a young lady who sings prettily on her way to marriage, and has a fascinating representative in Miss Camille d'Arville; an intriguing waiting-maid, made typically sharp and pert by Miss Josephine Findlay; and a resourceful duenna, who should be much obliged to Madame Ada Doree for making her amusing. VAUDEVILLE.—Mr. Thomas Thorne, Sole Lessee and Manager.—THIS EVENING, at 8.30, the successful comedy, JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART (160th time), by Robert Buchanan. Mr. Thomas Thorne and original company. At 7.45, an original one act play, by H. Byatt, entitled THE BROTHERS. For full cast see under clock. Box-office open 10 to 5.30.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—The Times says: "A more wholesome, more vigorous, more interesting, more enjoyable play . . . the public could not wish to see. The success . . . was unequivocal."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—The Daily Telegraph says: "'Joseph's Sweetheart' is, unquestionably, a clever piece of dramatic work, vigorous in action and replete with hearty and refreshing humour."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30. Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—The Daily Telegraph says: "Playgoers of all classes will be glad to renew their acquaintance with the delightful Parson Adams, so characteristically embodied and capitally played by Mr. Thomas Thorne; they will follow again with delight the scenes in which the virtuous Joseph and the passionate Lady Booby are engaged, remembering the skill of Mr. Conway and the fine comedy manner of Miss Vane; their sympathies will be arrested by the pathetic rendering of Fanny Goodwill by Miss Kate Rorke, and no doubt will have many words of praise to bestow on Mr. Fred. Thorne as the little Welshman, on Mr. Cyril Maude as the exquisite Lord Fellamar, and on Miss Gladys Homfrey as the handsome and good-hearted Mrs. Adams."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success. VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—The Daily Telegraph says: "Mr. Thorne has made a specialty at his house of high-class old English comedy, and 'Joseph's Sweetheart,' as a play and an example of modern dramatic literature, reflects credit on all concerned in it. Successful at the outset, the play is likely to attain an even wider popularity, seeing that comedies of this ambitious class are rare, and that the playgoing public has settled down to enjoy a spell of sound autumnal amusements. The house was as crowded last night as it was enthusiastic."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—The Morning Post says: "'Joseph's Sweetheart,' which, so far from losing any of its interest with the public through the iteration of 160 representations, is still as popular as ever."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—Mr. THOMAS THORNE as PARSON ADAMS.—The Morning Post says: "Mr. Thomas Thorne's fine impersonation of Parson Adams maintains its wonted pre-eminence in the cast. It is indeed an admirable stage portrait, strikingly true to the humour and sentiment of Fielding, and not less remarkable for artistic delicacy of execution than for vigorous grasp of conception. The actor may fairly claim to have 'created' the part, in the histrionic sense of the word."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success. VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—The Morning Post says: "It will suffice to say that through that long and unbroken practice to which allusion has already been made, the general representation has acquired smoothness, spirit, and finish in rare perfection."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success. VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—The Echo says: "The original company return to their comfortable and well-managed house to again delight and to entertain their patrons."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—Mr. THOMAS THORNE as PARSON ADAMS.—The Echo says: "As that sturdy, clean-souled Parson Adams, passing rich on (less than) £40 a year! Mr. Thorne is seen at his best. Amusing and pathetic, the fine character, one of the best in the whole realm of fiction, is most consistently presented, and when Mr. Thomas Thorne is on the stage it may justly be said of him, as was said of one of his most eminent predecessors in the histrionic art, 'He fills it.'"—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—Mr. THOMAS THORNE as PARSON ADAMS.—The Daily Chronicle says: "Mr. Thomas Thorne's Parson Adams is a ripe study, full of excellent points; when it is joyous it fairly beams upon the audience; when it is in grief it evokes a tender sympathy; and when it is raging in virtuous indignation, and the scene gives place to the man, it rouses a hearty feeling—half hilarious, half pugnacious—in unmistakable approval of justifiable weaknesses of the flesh. Mr. Thorne played last night with unmistakable fervour, and the night with the Parson, passing rich on twenty pounds a year, was in every sense an enjoyable one."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—The Daily Chronicle says: "The piece was received with, at times, boisterous approval, and has apparently entered on a new stage of prosperity which will carry it far into the winter season."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—The Stage says: "The Vaudeville Company, after a prosperous trip to several of the principal country centres, returned to their town house on Monday evening. 'Joseph's Sweetheart,' which had been true to them in the metropolis, did not fail them in the provinces, nor is it likely to do so now it is once more exquisitely placed on the Vaudeville stage, and there treated with all the skill and resource of art that characterise Mr. Thomas Thorne's productions."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—The Stage says: "The play is surely the most literary one of the year, with dialogue pointed, yet entirely natural, and with simple yet powerful interests that realise and therefore justify Mr. Robert Buchanan's aspiration to preserve in 'Joseph's Sweetheart' the humanity of Fielding's genius."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—The Stage says: "Playgoers should at once repair to the Vaudeville, and then again repair, and yet a third time."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

VAUDEVILLE.—JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—160th Time.—TO-NIGHT at 8.30. Great Success.

"POWER TO ABOLISH PLEASURE FAIR.

"33. For the purpose of abolishing the Pleasure Fair but not further or otherwise the Corporation may prohibit the entrance within the Borough during the month of November in any year of any show booth caravan travelling van circus or exhibition for such period or periods as they may think fit provided that they shall give at least one month's notice of any such prohibition which notice shall be given by advertisement in at least two newspapers circulating in the counties of Surrey and Middlesex and by placards affixed at or near the borough boundary on the principal roads leading into the borough and a statutory declaration by an officer of the Corporation to the effect that public notice has been given in accordance with this Section shall be received as evidence of the facts thereby declared."

"PENALTIES AND PROCEEDINGS.

"34. Any person bringing during the month of November in any year any such show booth caravan travelling van circus or exhibition within the Borough or being in charge of or accompanying any such show booth caravan travelling van circus or exhibition brought within the Borough after due notice of such prohibition as aforesaid has been given shall be liable to a penalty of not exceeding five pounds and to a daily penalty of not exceeding five pounds for every day for which such show booth caravan travelling van circus or exhibition shall remain within the Borough and without prejudice to any proceeding under this enactment it shall be lawful for the Corporation to cause any such show booth caravan travelling van circus or exhibition to be forthwith removed outside the Borough."

Notice is hereby Given that the Corporation do, for the purpose of abolishing the pleasure fair, prohibit the entrance within the Borough during the month of November every year of any show booth caravan travelling van circus or exhibition.

Dated this 25th day of September, 1888.

By order. WALTER M. WILKINSON, Town Clerk.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

"I feel duty bound to inform you of the wonderful effects of Clarke's Blood Mixture on me. I have had suffering over two years of a severe nature. I first consulted the best medical aid I could possibly procure for over six months, till my means were run out, and with a sad heart I was compelled to come into the workhouse hospital, where I now am. I had been here 18 months, and my legs gradually got worse. I began to think they would never get better, till about five months ago I read in a copy of the Hull, East Yorkshire, and Lincolnshire Times of 'Clarke's Blood Mixture,' and I determined that when I could raise the means I would try it; so I commenced to deprive myself of little necessaries till at length I had raised eleven shillings. I got my sister to purchase me a large bottle. She brought me one in on May 6, and to my surprise she brought me 1s. 9d. back, which enabled me to purchase two small pots of your Miraculous Salve. I commenced to use the Blood Mixture on May 7. I then had five wounds on the left leg, one very large on the ankle-bone, one on the shin about the size of half-a-crown, and three on the calf almost as large. The right leg was somewhat similar, but there were three sores which I thought would break into one, but all are perfectly healed up now but one small place on the left ankle about the size of a shilling. There are 15 patients in the ward that I am in, and they were surprised to see my legs when I had taken the mixture a week, and there are three of them now using it. I am very sorry, indeed, that I cannot purchase another bottle. You may judge for yourself how I am fixed, after being in here 18 months. My sister, Mrs. Bulmer, lives at No. 28, Grimsby-lane, Market-place, Hull, and if you would kindly send me a small quantity of your Mixture to the above address I should be able to get it, and I shall never forget you as long as I live.—Yours faithfully, EDWARD STATHAM.

LATER.

"I write to let you know how I am getting on. I received the bottle of Mixture you sent me, and the wounds are now completely healed up. I will be out of here in a few days, and get to work, which is already promised me. I am going to reside at my sister's, Mrs. Bulmer. If you wish to use this case for the benefit of other poor sufferers, do so. The results of your Mixture is really wonderful.—I remain, your thankful servant,

"June 30, 1888. EDWARD STATHAM."

LONDON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29.

Representatives of the Queen and Royal family were present yesterday at the funeral of Mrs. Hull, who was for many years in the service of her Majesty as nurse.

From the fourth report of the Select Committee on the Navy Estimates, which has just been issued, it appears that three of the naval members of the Board of Admiralty are strongly in favour of a considerable increase in the strength of the fleet, particularly in the way of fast cruisers.

Replying, through his secretary, to a correspondent who had called his attention to a recently-published version of the Woodford evictions, Mr. Balfour observes that in every one of the cases referred to the tenants refused to pay, not by reason of their poverty or because the rents were excessive, but in consequence of the intrigues of agitators, "who intimidate their victims in order to provide scenes for amateur politicians from England."

Mr. Biggar, M.P., has issued a letter in which he gives a flat denial to Mr. Chamberlain's statement that the Parnellites, from the lowest to the highest, made profit out of their "patriotism" and were a "kept party." He states that the greater number of his colleagues never got money for their Parliamentary services or expenses, while the disbursements made to any of them have been barely sufficient to recoup them for the outlays necessarily incurred in the performance of their public duties.

At a meeting of the Metropolitan Board of Works yesterday it was resolved, with but slight opposition, to prepare a concise history of the work of the Board from its establishment to the present time.

James Henderson, cab proprietor and driver, was charged by the police at Westminster yesterday with being drunk during his employment in Sloane-square. Two constables and the inspector on duty supported the summons. Count Stanislas Stenbock, who said he was a friend of Henderson's, having known him at Oxford in more prosperous days, swore that the defendant was not drunk, adding that the inspector at the station was grossly uncivil, and refused to call a doctor when requested. Other gentlemen corroborated this testimony, and the magistrate, remarking that the inspector might have acted a little more judiciously, dismissed the charge. He suggested, however, that the defendant should be summoned for obstructing the police and defying their regulations.

Nearly £600,000 in gold was withdrawn from the Bank yesterday against an influx of £183,000, and the Stock Markets were consequently unsettled. American railways, although finally under the best, were firm, but English, Canadian, and Mexican lines gave way. Foreign Government bonds declined on lower Paris prices. Anglo-American telegraph stocks receded. Consols were ⅛ lower. The fortnightly settlement was satisfactorily completed.

WE close to-day, not without some reluctance, the extraordinary correspondence which for over seven weeks past has poured its astonishing volume into our columns upon the question, "Is Marriage a Failure?" This is by no means on account of any lack of material wherewith to continue the flood of social debate. Letters from all sorts and conditions of men and women still inundate us, many of them of intrinsic interest, and constantly presenting fresh points of personal experience or private opinion; but the closure must be at last applied to this exhaustless daily discussion, in the course of which we have received more than twenty-seven thousand communications, although naturally but a small portion of them could obtain publicity. Whoever closely followed the stream of the sufficiently copious selection which we printed—and we are well assured that innumerable readers have regularly perused the correspondence—must have been impressed, in proportion to his intelligence, with the variety, the vigour, the individuality, the strong sense, the perspicuity, the earnestness, and, let us add, the hearty and pleasant humanity, displayed in the vast majority of these communications. The safety-valve which we opened nearly two months ago for the expression of general feeling upon this momentous topic has let forth ever since a current of pent-up hopes and fears, wishes and regrets, ideals and realisations, views, aspirations, comments, and theories, marvellous in their range and richness of personal knowledge, but of so mighty a bulk that it obscures somewhat the original thesis, and renders analysis and deduction a difficult if not impossible task. In the case of hundreds among those who have joined in this informal "Parliament of Love," it was as though a confessional had been opened; they have found obvious relief in confiding to the public ear, in some instances the joys, in others the sorrows, of their wedded lives. Now it was a happy pair blessing the day which united them; now a sadly-assorted couple anathematising the chains that bound their unwilling necks together. Maidens have demurely reproached swains for hanging back, and bachelors have arraigned spinsters for neglecting the ways and means to render themselves eligible; joyous BENEDICKS have rebuked querulous ones; glad wives and lamenting lovers with "unappropriated blessings" of all ages and stations, in all the various phases of the tender passion, took pen in hand to breathe a sigh or broach an argument—to lift, in fact, the roofs off their houses and the veils from their hearts. It will be easily understood that the duty of censorship on our own side was constant and difficult. This vast tide of public confidences would have broken a hundred times, had it been permitted, into side channels and back-waters of debate and revelation, intensely interesting ofttimes, and intimately connected with the main topic, but leading to problems unexplored or delicate. These divergences, however well intended, had throughout to be suppressed, and the discussion confined as much as possible to opinions and experiences upon the central question. Nor can we now feel anything but the highest satisfaction to have thus evoked a body of spontaneous, genuine, and extremely interesting expressions of view, wherein, among thousands of good letters, many have appeared of remarkable and even admirable wisdom and insight—while the large majority of them have certainly been characterised by a spirit of "sweet reasonableness" in the fullest sense creditable to the homes of the nation and to the hearts of those who dwell in them.

We did not expect, and we have not to-day to announce, any revelation of a new or widely illuminating nature upon the relations of the sexes and the institution of marriage as it exists at present among us. The fact, indeed, was certain that the discussion must end where it began, namely, in this great but obvious generalisation, that happiness in wedlock, as in every other phase of human experience and every other form of social existence, depends, not upon systems, laws, customs, or conventions, but upon the individual. Yet this truism—which possesses, no doubt, immense philosophical and biological significance—if it could not be made novel or greatly developed, was assuredly never before illustrated with such abounding wealth of facts and testimonies. If anything has clearly come forth from this huge correspondence, it is the old lesson that, of all the social woes and troubles of our kind, the proportion is enormous in which they are self-created, and very small indeed that which "laws can cause or cure." As each critic or complainant has mournfully rattled his or her nuptial chain in the hearing of the public, the obvious moral in most cases has been "Tu l'as voulu, GEORGES DANDIN." It was all their own doing! Similarly with happiness: who has not observed, in studying these outpourings, how the letters which told of happy households, united hearts, and brave, glad comradeship in the battle of life, revealed also the secret of these things, by indicating sweet and sunny tempers, minds accustomed to give and take, gentleness, self-government, patience, forbearance, and dutifulness—those virtues, in point of fact, which obtain felicity simply because they manufacture it. We have, indeed, no words by which sufficiently to declare how profoundly we have been impressed by the vast amount of this evident good sense, good temper, and solid homeliness emerging from the ocean of letters. By "homeliness" we do not imply anything connected with style or range of ideas, for indeed in this respect the grace and ease of diction and the lucidity of views exhibited by so many unknown writers have been quite notable. What we imply is the large prevalence in men and women alike of that soft and fair spirit of homely humanity and honour and love which grows up naturally in right-minded homes, which keeps them right-minded, peaceable, and glad, and which is at the heart of the greatness and prosperity of this nation—its secret, its safeguard, and its continuing force. Beyond doubt the prodigious mutual consultation of the community in our columns has brought into prominence many blots and blunders in our social system, which must and will be removed eventually by more than one legislative reform. For instance, the consensus of the letters is overwhelmingly strong against early marriages. Again and again bitter testimony has been borne to the mischiefs, physical and domestic, resulting from the rash unions of raw and inexperienced youth; and our law, which has already interfered to mark the nubile age and to settle sexual fitness, ought, we think, to forbid marriages to young men under twenty-one and to young women under nineteen. Among the working classes especially this would produce, we believe, an excellent effect. Then, also, it is clear to our mind that the Law of Divorce must be enlarged to permit dissolution of marriage for desertion, for lunacy, for confirmed inebriety, for conviction of disgraceful crimes, as likewise for established incompatibility of temper and temperament, such as a just and prudent Judge would admit to be adequate. That the Marriage Service as it stands calls also for alteration has been abundantly demonstrated by these letters, and the sooner his Grace the Primate finishes with the Athanasian Creed and turns his attention to the passages in that service which shock young minds and disconcert older ones—the better! Yet, when all this is done, the happiest people will still be those who did not ask, and have never needed any changes. Such are the countless "homely," honest, faithful persons, so aboundingly revealed in our columns, who choose deliberately, and who cleave to their choice dutifully—making the best of life's trials hand in hand; lovers to the last, or, at least, good hearty friends and fast companions; people who have known and acted on the knowledge that what we sow we reap, that what we deserve we obtain, that the duties of wedded life are stern and serious, and that the water of the marriage-feast is only to be turned into wine by the miracle of a diviner touch than the hand of selfishness and unbelief ever laid upon it.

It goes without saying that the burden of this stupendous correspondence has proved to be overwhelmingly in favour of marriage. Apart from the fact that the contented are wont to keep silence, while the discontented cry out loudest, ten happy writers to a single querulous or hapless one have nevertheless given ardent testimony of gratitude and loyalty upon the side of the grand old institution which has sprung to its present settled dignities from the necessities and conditions of civilisation, and which works a thousand times better, all things considered, than any system which could possibly replace it. That it has faults and drawbacks is merely to say that it is of human institution. That it brings sometimes miseries instead of joys, and blasts the lives which it should have crowned and elevated, is mainly because people forget that they must lie in the beds which they have made for themselves, and that nothing will ever end well which does not begin honestly, sincerely, and from the right and proper spirit. But the fetters of marriage differ from all other bonds in this respect, that they sit lightest on those who need them least, and heaviest on those who would abuse a larger liberty for selfish reasons. It is not, however, our present purpose, nor, indeed, our business, to go deeply into the philosophy of these matters—upon which, of course, a thousand things might be said. Enough that marriage, besides being more than a common contract, more even than a consecration of love and coronation of chastity, is a compact of justice towards the woman and of permanent provision for the children, a fundamental civil rite without which society would go to pieces like an arch losing its keystone, and civilisation, morality, and home-life be lost. As an institution, it will survive, therefore, all attacks; and nothing has better proved this than the general scope and tone of the astonishing and unparalleled public discussion of which we to-day announce the termination. In doing so we must repeat our deep appreciation of the general dignity, elevation, good sense, and honest sentiments of our countless correspondents. It has been, for the most part, a positive honour to our columns to make room for so many and such worthy and good-hearted exponents—men and women—of the duties and recompenses of true attachment and of faithful hearts. Those certainly obtain the victory in this long discussion who have—from all ranks of life and in such amazing numbers—perceived and proclaimed that marriage is no failure when the qualities and virtues which make it a success are present, and when it is contracted and continued in the knowledge that its responsibilities are as great as its rewards.

PERHAPS the power whom BURNS invoked on the memorable occasion of his contemplating a certain unconsciously-displayed ornament on a lady's bonnet could render even more useful services to communities than to individuals. Nowhere, certainly, would its interpretation appear more urgently demanded than when nations are engaged in criticising each other. How invaluably, for instance, it might have served the Austrian Consul in Yokohama to have been enabled to see his countrymen "as others see them" at the time when he was composing his commercial report on Japanese trade! "It is not easy," writes Herr KREILNER, "for foreigners to have business relations with Japanese merchants." They still labour to some extent under the disadvantages to which the commercial classes were formerly subjected in Japan. In past times they were so low in the social scale that "under the oppression of universal contempt there was no possibility of the development of the moral qualities." Universal contempt is not, indeed, a stimulant to well-doing, and, if the Japanese were still under its ban, their low morality would not be surprising. The opening of their country to trade, however, should have operated to remove the last lingering effects of this ancient stigma—but no. Thirty years, the Austrian Consul thinks, is not long enough for the purification of the class. This comparatively short time has not been sufficient to eradicate the deeply-rooted habits and feelings of centuries, especially when "legislation is still defective and does not force the merchant to straightforward dealing." In default of this artificial aid to integrity, the condition of the Japanese merchant, in Herr Kreilner's account of him, is very unsatisfactory. He lacks "tenacity, uprightness, and an enterprising spirit," and, in doing business with him, "two main factors, confidence and credit, are wanting." The gravity of this indictment need not be insisted upon. Yet how strange and disconcerting that, perhaps, at the very time when this stern censor was surveying the manners and customs of the commercial class in Japan from his desk at the Austrian Consulate, a "chiel" of a foreign nationality should have been loose among the Consul's countrymen and "taking notes" of the tricks and manners of this same class at the Austrian capital in an almost identical spirit! The Vienna tradesman, says this severe critic, will, without the slightest compunction, palm off the most trashy articles for good wares. Everything is made for show, without durability. The dye used in the material for ladies' dresses fades in the sun or turns into ironmould at the wash; the tailors' cloth shrinks and tears; and the upholsterers' furniture cracks. Blotting-paper does not blot, though writing-paper does. Pens snap, ink is viscid, soap greasy; and in place of the last article the purchaser is usually offered either high-priced English and French soaps or spurious imitations of them. In fact, the trade-marks of great London and Paris firms are impudently pirated on all goods much in demand, though the forger is generally German, and the Austrian contents himself with the simpler and less ingenious industry of passing off the counterfeits.

If any Japanese tailor or upholsterer should see and feel hurt at Herr Kreilner's strictures on his order, here is balm for his wounded susceptibilities. Indeed, there is, so to speak, balm enough, and a little over. For the intelligent Jap would not find it very difficult, taking the Austrian Consul's indictment as a text, to frame a very much more damaging accusation against the Viennese shopkeeper. The latter, for instance, has not, it might be pointed out, the excuse of having passed through a long period of subjection to social obloquy. The smart tradesman of the Graben or the Ringstrasse has never at any time of his life occupied the position of a pariah, or anything approaching to it; and he has been open to all the elevating influences of civilisation for much more than thirty years. There has been plenty of time to eradicate any of the predatory habits that he may have inherited from periods anterior to the invention of the arts. Yet, if he differs at all in character from his Japanese confrère, it is only, the latter might plausibly argue, for the worse. Indeed, we are not sure that the Japanese merchant might not, if he pushed his advantage, make out a very telling case in support of the proposition that it is by intercourse with the wicked Austrians and their like that his own morality has been corrupted. How, to begin with, does Herr Kreilner know what the ethics of Old Japan were like, among the trading classes, before the country was opened up to the commercial classes? Perhaps this opening up was at the bottom of all the mischief; and the thirty years which the Austrian Consul fondly believes to have been a period of steady if too tardy development of nascent commercial virtue may have witnessed an equally steady and only too speedy descent on the part of the trader into commercial vice. Misconceptions as serious have occurred before, and it is quite conceivable that Herr Kreilner has been a victim of the amiable vanity of the European, as others have been before him. Argumentative material in support of such a view might even be gathered by a Japanese merchant with a turn for controversy from the Herr's report. For he "cracks up" the Chinese as much as he runs down their next-door neighbours in respect of trading morality; and, of course, the most striking and salient difference between the two peoples is on the point of accessibility to Western influence. "Though credit establishments do not exist in China," writes the Consul, "dishonesty is very rare among the merchants. They are earnest, solid men, and enjoy the greatest confidence of their foreign colleagues." Exactly; they remain "earnest, solid men," as the Japanese themselves would have done if in an evil hour they had not listened to the voice of the tempter from the Land of the Setting Sun, and adopted his commercial morality along with his coat and trousers and his chimney-pot hat.

Among European peoples the influence of civilisation upon uncivilised—or, according to Western notions, imperfectly civilised—races is alternately a subject of complacency and a theme of satire. No doubt there is a touch of exaggeration in either case. The unsophisticated objects of our solicitude in the lands into which the restless foot of Western enterprise is more and more persistently penetrating are undoubtedly not unqualified gainers from the opening up of their countries. Civilisation teaches them a good deal which they would be the better for not knowing, and introduces them to many vices which they "take" in as virulent a form as they do a newly-imported European disease. Maladies that among civilised races form a familiar and comparatively harmless incident of every nursery act with terrible potency upon savage blood, and carry off their victims by tens of thousands. These outer children of humanity are as little able to sustain the contagion of the morally infected organisms with which civilisation brings them in contact. At the same time it is absurd to talk, as was once the fashion, about the curses which the European colonist brings with him, as though they constituted his entire baggage. Civilisation means something more, even to the most backward of the races that come under its influence, than "sized" calico and "trade rum." In many cases it finds the peoples among whom it makes its way in an abundantly well-equipped condition as regards naturally vicious instincts, and it does no more—though this may be bad enough—than supply them with the means of their gratification. The "noble savage" of the North American Continent would have drunk fire-water wherever and whenever he could have got it; and he was lazy and thievish from the beginning. If he would not sell "the nutmegs made of wood, the clocks that wouldn't figure," his abstention from these arts is due, not to force of moral rectitude, but to lack of mechanical ingenuity. He has his own peculiar sins, adapted to his limited capacity, and he makes the most of them. And what is true of savages is true, with necessary deductions for the difference in their history, of the old and stationary civilisations of the East. They are none of them, we may be sure, so backward as not to have trained the people living under them in the elementary art of cheating one another. There is, indeed, every reason to believe that the art is older than civilisation itself. Probably the first man who exchanged a flint axe for an overcoat of skins either "did" or was "done by" the other party to the transaction. The primeval hunter and fisherman must have found ever-increasing facilities for "smart" trading, and we all know what must have followed as soon as man tamed the horse. It will not do to imagine that barbarism or any civilisation short of the Western type means innocence; but, on the other hand, it is a dangerous thing to lecture the races of the East on their immorality from a high Western standpoint, and may subject one to the inconvenient retort to which Herr Kreilner has just exposed himself.

Never do wood, field, hedgerow, copse, and tree appear more attractive to English eyes than when they are bathed in the sunshine of a brilliant autumnal morning, such as we have seen repeated almost every day for the last three weeks. Pheasant-shooting commences on Monday next, and when the shades of evening fall thousands of "long-tails" will have bitten the dust before the deadly aim of countless wielders of the breechloader. The celebrated Squire Osbaldeston, who is said to have killed ninety-seven partridges out of one hundred shots, once remarked that a pheasant-covert of six acres should, if properly preserved, contain from one thousand to twelve hundred birds, in order to render it worthy to be shot by gunners of the highest excellence and skill. Since Mr. Osbaldeston's day the system of rearing pheasants by hand has made such amazing advances that the bags now secured in the best shooting counties of England would fill the former owner of Ebberston and Hunmanby, in the East Riding of Yorkshire, with wonder and astonishment. In the same coverts where the Squire and his old-fashioned friends, who shot until the year 1825 or thereabouts with flint and steel fowling-pieces, were content to kill three or four hundred pheasants in a day, their modern successors regard it as poor sport if the game-list handed round the dinner-table at night does not record the death of at least one thousand pheasants, with a proportionate number of hares, rabbits, and woodcocks. Thus on December 16, 1875, nine shooters, of whom Lord Walsingham and Lord Huntingfield were the most dexterous, killed fifteen hundred and seventy-two pheasants, two hundred and thirty-five hares, ninety rabbits, and five woodcocks, in the Home Wood at Merton, Lord Walsingham's country seat in Norfolk. In four successive days nearly four thousand pheasants fell to the gun on Lord Walsingham's estate, and the slaughter in Lord Londesborough's coverts near Selby, in Yorkshire, is usually on the same enlarged scale. Despite the badness of the breeding season, the heaviest bag of grouse ever made in a single day was secured by Lord Walsingham on his Yorkshire moor at the end of last month. It is evident, therefore, that our modern moors and woods hold far more game than was the case when the century was young. There can be little doubt that the great publicity now accorded to exceptionally large bags contributes powerfully to the stimulation of the zeal, vigilance, and—we may add—the honesty of gamekeepers. Time was when at least half the pheasant eggs dropped on a large estate were surreptitiously sold by rascally keepers to London buyers. In or about the year 1833, Mr. Coke, of Norfolk, addressed a strong remonstrance to landlords all over the United Kingdom, praying them to abstain from purchasing pheasant eggs from dealers, because they encouraged fraud by creating a market for such commodities. Mr. Coke's remonstrances fell, we regret to say, on heedless ears.

Nowadays there are many landlords who openly sell their pheasant eggs and their young birds to owners of estates in other counties that desire to get up a large head of game in a few months. We live in days when no secrets are hid, and it would be almost impossible for a keeper or a poacher to ship large lots of game eggs by rail to London, Manchester, or any other big town without the matter being reported sooner or later to the despoiled owners of properties from which the eggs were stolen. Sydney Smith once remarked in an "Edinburgh Review" article that there was no such thing as an honest head-keeper or an honest head-gardener on any large estate in England. The witty Canon of St. Paul's was of one mind with Dean Swift, who, in his famous "Directions to Servants," spoke of the butlers, footmen, cooks, and gardeners of the great as bands of robbers who got rich by purloining and selling property which belonged to their employers. Not many years since the owner of a large country seat in Cheshire chanced to get up very early in the morning, and, going into the yard behind his house, he discovered his man-cook engaged in loading a cart which was drawn up at the back-door. As the master unexpectedly hove in sight the cook threw a rug hastily over the contents of the cart. "What have you got there?" asked the master, and, his suspicions being aroused, he lifted the rug and laid bare several brace of pheasants and a score or two of hares, which were about to be despatched to the nearest market town for sale to a game-dealer who owned the cart in question. On inquiry it transpired that for many years fraudulent dealings between the cook and the tradesman had been carried on. Such illicit proceedings, although little likely to be ever suppressed altogether, are of far rarer occurrence at present than was the case when there were no county police and no telegraph wires. In these times the fees given to keepers by gentlemen who have assisted at the slaughter of a thousand pheasants in a day are so liberal that honesty is better policy than clandestine pilfering. Moreover, the keepers who have charge of famous shooting-coverts take no little pride in showing good sport to their master's guests. In short, the system which now prevails almost universally on well-preserved estates of rearing large broods of pheasants by hand under coops incites the pride of keepers and night-watchers, who never give the poachers a chance of carrying off the young birds, which have been raised from eggs bought wholesale from London dealers. The result is seen in the enormous bags which are made every winter on scores of estates in Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgeshire, and other counties, famous for their prodigal production of feathered game. There are at present few such instances of larceny as that recorded seventy years ago by Mr. Surtees, the brother-in-law of Lord Chancellor Eldon, who used to relate that a gamekeeper in Durham got rich by habitually selling pheasants' eggs, which he had stolen from his employer, to a Dorsetshire landlord. Not a season now passes in which these eggs are not openly offered for sale by Metropolitan dealers, and the traffic in them has assumed enormous proportions. At present an extensive stock is seldom maintained without frequent purchases of eggs, which are hatched by hens, and the young birds are turned out into the adjoining woods when they are big enough to provide themselves with food. Every day the keepers lay down grain, or damaged raisins, or ants' eggs in the woods which the pheasants frequent, and although the birds are sometimes sneered at as "tame, barn-door fowls," the sport secured by experts with the gun is a sufficient justification for a practice which is resorted to almost universally.

When the pheasant, be his origin what it may, has become accustomed to the haunts in which his life is passed he is one of the hardiest birds in existence. In order to give him a fair chance of enjoying life, it is necessary, however, that coverts adapted to his somewhat fastidious tastes should be provided for his habitation, and that they should be kept undisturbed by night and day. Nothing is more certain than that the suspension of strict preservation of game in these islands would soon lead to the extermination of the Phasianus Colchicus. He is a timid creature, an "article de luxe," and, as such, must be preserved artificially. Our enterprising kinsmen in the United States, with Mr. Pierre Lorillard, the owner of the Derby and St. Leger winner, Iroquois, at their head, have done their best to introduce the pheasant to the North American Continent, but have thus far failed in their object, by reason of the extreme severity of the winter in the Northern States of the Union, where the experiment has alone been tried. It is possible that the pheasant might thrive in the Southern States, if he is able to stand the abnormal heat of summer in Louisiana, Texas, Alabama, and Georgia. For the present, however, he is at his best in the United Kingdom, France, Germany, and Austria, although nowhere can such bags be made as in Norfolk and Suffolk. The celebrated coverts in Suffolk, which once belonged to the rich Mr. Thellusson, and are now the property of Lord Rendlesham, vie with those at Merton, Holkham, and Riddlesworth in their exuberant production of this splendid game-bird. There are, however, thousands of smaller estates, scattered all over these islands, where the crack of the breechloader will be heard the day after to-morrow, with a result which will be seen and felt in the London market. The pheasant is less affected by a bad breeding season than the partridge or the grouse, and this year we doubt not that the bags will be as big as usual. The birds are said to be a fortnight or three weeks later than in ordinary years; but their numbers will doubtless be sufficient to gladden the hearts of the many famous English shots whose names are familiar to sportsmen all over the world.

Yesterday took place, with all the customary and ancient formalities, the annual election of the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex; and it may be a matter for curious speculation whether a feeling exceeding one of languid indifference will be evinced by the public at large on learning that, under the operation of the new Local Government Act, the functions of the Sheriffs of London will, at the beginning of the new year, be divorced from those exercised by the Sheriffs of Middlesex. For some reason not very easy to trace, it seems impossible to get up what the Americans term a "boom" about the Local Government Act. Very different was the case fifty-three years ago, when, to the horror of Lord Eldon and a multitude of uncompromising old Tories, the Municipal Reform Act was passed; and Miss Martineau, in her "History of England during the Thirty Years' Peace," has drawn a pathetic contrast between the exultation of the Reformers at seeing ancient charity renovated, schools and asylums rising again, coffers filling with wealth restored to the purposes of the needy, and the whole country planted with little republics where the citizens would henceforth be trained to political thought and public virtue, and the dire consternation and mortification of the Conservatives at the extinction throughout the provinces of antique municipal observances and shows. The City of London was happily exempted from the ruthless action of the besom which, to quote the irreverent expression of O'Connell, "swept away the tagrag and bobtail of municipal tomfoolery"; and from that day to this no serious attempt has been made to interfere with the due splendour and picturesqueness of civic pageantry. On the contrary, that Chief Magistrate is usually most popular who imports the largest quantity of brass bands, banners, knights in armour, and allegorical tableaux into the annual show of the 9th of November; while the only Lord Mayor, in modern times at least, who repudiated the use of the historical State coach, and progressed from Guildhall to Westminster and back again in a chocolate-coloured brougham was heartily hooted for his pains. The ceremonial of yesterday lacked nothing of its antique pomp and circumstance and its evening hospitalities; and it is to be hoped and believed that at the Guildhall banquet next November the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, arrayed in the fullest panoply of robes and gold chains will be as of yore amongst the most conspicuous figures at the magnificent entertainment of which an appreciative Corporation allows them to defray half the cost.

Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, however, they will be no longer in 1889; nor in other respects are signs and tokens wanting that the time is not far off when of the Sheriffs of London themselves it may be said that their glory, like that of Ichabod, is departed. It will be noted, too, as a curious fact, that at the very time when the Legislature was shearing away the privileges of the old Saxon "Scyrgerefa," the Reeve or officer of the shire—the prototype of the modern sheriff—considerable development and amplification were being given in the constitution of the County Councils to the attributes of the equally ancient "ealdorman" or alderman. Of old the Sheriff was a very potent dignitary indeed, both in London and in the provinces. As regards the High Sheriffs, the modern practice is for the Lord Chancellor, the First Lord of the Treasury, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, together with all the Judges of the three Courts of Common Law, to meet in the Exchequer Chamber on the morrow of St. Martin, which is the 12th of November, when the Judges report the names of three fit persons in each county. These are afterwards reported to the Queen, who appoints one of them to be Sheriff by the elegant process of pricking the name of the favoured gentleman with a golden bodkin. When the appointment is legal and there is no sufficient excuse it is a misdemeanour to refuse to serve. As a rule, the reluctance of a county gentleman to fill the distinguished office is quite genuine. To be High Sheriff means the spending of a very large sum of money without any perceptible return; he must keep a state carriage and a chaplain, and is in peril of being severely rebuked, if indeed he escape being heavily fined, by the Judges at assize time if he do not provide a sufficient escort of javelinmen, or if their Lordships object to the shrieval retainers as bearing too close a resemblance to Falstaff's recruits, who walked wide between the legs as though they had gyves on. The duties of the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex are even more varied and extensive than those of their congeners in the provinces. They are elected by their fellow-citizens; but they are the Queen's bailiffs, the keepers of her peace, and ministerial officers of her superior courts of justice, in which last capacity they are bound to execute many of the edicts issuing from the superior courts, and all writs of execution; and in particular they are responsible for the execution of criminals. There is a popular belief that if nobody else can be found to hang a murderer the Sheriff is bound to carry out the supreme behests of the law himself. As the Queen's bailiff in England, he has likewise to preserve the rights of her Majesty within his bailiwick, must seize all lands devolving to the Crown by escheat or attainder; and must levy all fines and forfeitures; while, as keeper of the peace, he is bound to pursue and take all murderers, traitors, felons, and other misdoers, and commit them to gaol for safe custody. In fact, this exalted functionary was formerly a glorified police-constable, who was empowered to interfere for the suppression of street-brawls and riotous revelry within doors; for does not Shakespeare tell us in "Henry IV." that "the Sheriff, with a most monstrous watch," came to the door of the Boar's Head in Eastcheap when the fun was growing too fast and furious at that obstreperous hostelry?

The mutations of civilisation, the supersession of common by statute law, and the almost imperceptible but inevitable disappearance of time-honoured observances have restricted within a comparatively limited area the formerly wide-embracing functions of the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex. Many of their ministerial duties are now performed by the Under-sheriffs; they have still their under-bailiffs, or Sheriff's officers, who put in force the writs of execution issued by the superior courts; but the Debtors Act of 1869 has absorbed the writ of "capias ad satisfaciendum"—imprisonment for debt, although it still exists, is a power much more frequently exercised by the county courts than by the superior tribunals; and the Sheriff's officers no longer find it profitable to keep sponging-houses for the reception of debtors prior to their transference by writ of Habeas Corpus to the Fleet or the Queen's Bench. The Prisons Act, again, has considerably lessened the importance of the Sheriffs with respect to what were formerly common or corporate gaols. Newgate and Holloway are now not nominally but substantially her Majesty's prisons; and although the Sheriffs yet exercise the lugubrious office of announcing to condemned murderers the date fixed upon for their execution, and are supposed to be present, either personally or by deputy, at every hanging, they are no longer called upon to appoint and maintain, as a permanent and salaried functionary, a "yeoman of the halter," or common hangman. In a couple of generations our descendants may wonder what manner of man Jack Ketch was, or why the Sheriff should have had anything to do with criminals and prisons at all. It must not, however, be assumed that ministerially the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex have lost their "raison d'être." The appearance of their officers armed with writs of execution is too often the tragic dénouement of an action at-law; but the Sheriff's officer, whose charge is frequently transmitted from father to son, and who is only remotely concerned with the annual election to the shrievalty, is otherwise totally unconcerned with any matters of civic pageantry or tradition. A Sheriff's officer nowadays is decidedly the reverse of a picturesque personage, and his followers are as certainly not in the habit of wearing blue or pink jerkins, or peaked shoes with rosettes, or of carrying either banners or javelins. Very probably the exalted civic dignitaries who, when the Local Gover[illegible] comes into operation, will be Sheriffs [illegible] but not of Middlesex, will be only too [illegible] dissociated from the ministerial duties, even when performed by deputy, which have hitherto been incumbent on them in the county of Middlesex, and which may be broadly characterised as so much very dirty work. One rather amusing problem remains, however, to be solved. There will, we suppose, be a Sheriff or High Sheriff of the county of London. Will he, like his colleague in the City proper, make a gloriously grandiose appearance, on State occasions, in a robe and a gold chain? and will he be one of the hosts at an annual County Council banquet, of which he will be expected to pay half the expense?

It has been fixed that the presentation of the freedom of the burgh of Nairn to the Marquis of Hartington shall take place on Tuesday next at noon.

PARIS DAY BY DAY.

[BY SPECIAL WIRE.]

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

PARIS, Friday Night.

Next week an original kind of fête will take place in Paris in aid of the sufferers from the inundations in French Guiana. The famous Cour d'Amour organised by Richelieu at the Hôtel de Rambouillet will be revived, the great Court-Ladies being represented by some of the most charming actresses of Paris. The modern members of the proposed Court of Love will be appropriately carried to the mock Hôtel de Rambouillet in Sedan-chairs, and a tournament will be enacted before them. After the jousts there will be a choregraphic entertainment, in which some of the most popular sylphs of the ballet will exhibit to the public the elasticity of their limbs and the elegance of their movements. The festive proceedings will terminate with a Masked-ball, in which the ladies are to appear in costumes of the Sixteenth, Seventeenth, and Eighteenth Centuries. According to present arrangements the Fête is to come off on Thursday next, Oct. 4. It would be a pity if silks, satins, powdered wigs, and delicately-painted faces were to be spoiled by adverse weather, like that annual fraud the "Flower Festival," which is generally rendered ridiculous by the rains of the early Summer. If, however, atmospheric indications and meteorological vaticinations go for anything, next week will be fine, and the numerous damsels who are preparing for the Court of Love may be easy in their minds. Paris is just now revelling in clear skies and genial sunshine, and it is piously to be hoped that there will be no break in the Autumnal splendour until the termination of the interesting programme drawn up by the charitable organisers of the promised festival.

Prince Bismarck was expected here to contradict the authenticity of the "Diary of the late Emperor Frederick the Third." French politicians were almost unanimous in the opinion that the German Chancellor would never suffer a work to pass unchallenged which at one fell swoop deprived him of so much of the prestige which he has so long enjoyed; but I am bound to say that even impartial critics on this side of the frontier entertain no doubt as to the genuineness of the "Journal." Indeed, fair-minded men have been found to maintain that, far from throwing any slur on Prince Bismarck's reputation, the "Diary" showed that he was prudent and moderate, and innocent of much of the intrigue which had been laid at his door. It demonstrates that he had not advocated War with France as a certain step towards the establishment of the German Empire. His hesitations, and those of the Emperor William the First, placed the character and policy both of King and Minister in an entirely new and by no means unsympathetic light. It was, however, taken for granted from the first that the Chancellor would not accept this novel situation without something more than a protest, and the result has proved that our French friends were correct in their forecast; but no one would have dreamed of predicting that, in his desire to discredit the "Diary," the Chancellor would go to such extreme lengths, and cast reflections on the memory of the Emperor Frederick the Third "in blind hate and vengeance," as one writer puts it this evening. Various discrepancies are also pointed out in the document which was officially published yesterday at Berlin. In short, the prevailing feeling here is that Prince Bismarck has not only failed egregiously in his efforts to convince the World that the "Diary" is a forgery, but has displayed so much irritation into the bargain as signally to defeat his own object. A temperate denial might have brought many persons round to the view that after all the "Journal" might not be authentic; but such an exhibition of Envy, Hatred, and Malice only confirms thoughtful men in the idea that every line of the "Diary" is true. We can well believe that the "sensation" produced at Berlin by the publication of the Chancellor's Report is immense. Here it is the subject of general conversation. "La Revanche du Mort" is the heading of a moderate article in which the writer, while expressing his implicit belief in the genuineness of the "Journal," regrets its appearance at this juncture and the attitude which Prince Bismarck has thought fit to assume. He regards the Chancellor as, in the main, an element of Peace, and he considers that any diminution of his prestige and influence will be a loss not only to Germany but to Europe. Prince Bismarck can alone exercise a moderating influence on an Emperor who is believed to have a taste for "adventure."

Both the Presidents of the Senate and the Chamber are in the country. Telegrams were despatched asking them which date they preferred for the re-assembling of Parliament. The Cabinet had originally chosen Oct. 9, but afterwards it inclined to Oct. 15. Both M. Le Royer and M. Méline at once answered in favour of Oct. 15; so, at the Cabinet-Council held this morning under M. Floquet's presidency, it was definitely settled that Parliament should meet on that day; but what other answer could have been expected from men who are reposing in rural retreats in this delightful weather? Even Presidents are human, and M. Méline for one, who has pronounced agricultural proclivities, must infinitely prefer a lounge under his vine and fig-tree, in an easy-fitting suit, to the heated atmosphere and the din and tumult of the House which, clad in an evening dress, he often strives in vain to control with desperate peals of his Bell.

The Prefect of Police has just adopted a measure which, if properly carried out, will put an end to an intolerable nuisance. He has issued a decree to the effect that henceforth the vendors of newspapers will only be permitted to proclaim the title of the journal which they are carrying. For some time past a number of these worthies have been allowed unlimited licence in their cries, with the result that they have called so largely on their imagination as utterly to mislead the Public as to the contents of their newspapers. Trifling incidents have been magnified to such an extent through the medium of their stentorian lungs as to lead innocent way-farers to imagine that phenomenal events never dreamed of in their philosophy had been passing under their very noses, so that in sheer confusion and shame they have rushed up to the camelot for a copy, only to find that they had been egregiously taken in. The Prefect of Police has now interfered to stop this questionable trade. It remains, however, to be seen whether the "New Regulations" will be more honoured in the breach than in the observance. At any rate the victims of misplaced confidence will be able to take their revenge by reporting the case to the nearest sergent-de-ville.

Comte Louis Charles Greffulhe, who has just died in his Paris house in the Faubourg Saint-Honoré, was at one time well-known in London Society. The Greffulhes settled in Holland on the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, and became wealthy burghers. The first Count was raised to that dignity by Louis the Eighteenth, who, when he was in exile in England as the "Comte de Provence," was liberally supplied with funds by the Franco-Dutch capitalist. Comte Louis Charles, who has died, was seventy-four years old. He married the sister of the present Duc de La Rochefoucauld-d'Estissac, who bore him a son and two daughters, one of the girls being now Princess Augusta of Arenberg. The deceased nobleman had a splendid country seat at Bois-Boudran, in the Department of the Seine et Marne, and was famous for his hunting parties. He had devoted himself altogether to the pursuits of a wealthy country gentleman, having given up politics in 1848.

Don Francisco d'Assisi, husband of Queen Isabella of Spain, is the latest victim of the Paris burglar. The Don has a country-house at Epinay-sur-Seine, a few miles away from the metropolis, and during his absence at the seaside the Château was broken into the other night. The burglar, however, found nothing but a few suits of clothes, some artistic knick-knacks and articles of inferior value, which he carried away and sold to the owner of an omnium-gatherum shop at Saint-Denis. "Sykes" has since been arrested, and the Don's effects have been duly restored to their rightful owner.

Maxime Lisbonne, Communist, Dramatist, Publican, and Theatrical-manager, has had a new and remarkable business idea. He is going to "run" a tavern which will be called "Les Frites Révolutionnaires" and will be a political-[illegible]nomical establishment, to be opened on the [illegible] October that the Chambers meet [illegible] Parliamentary session. M. Lisbonne [illegible] at his first essay as a cabaretier. [illegible]vemonth ago, or thereabouts, he astonished [illegible]ontmartre and the "World" by opening a long, narrow tavern on the Boulevard de Clichy, which was called "The Hulks," and bore over its entrance the well-worn inscription seen by Dante on the Gates of Pandemonium. Inside "The Hulks" refreshments were supplied by waiters attired as "turnkeys," or "convicts," whose eccentric costumes recalled the experiences of the host himself when he was banished with Rochefort, Louis Michel, and others to Nouméa after the lurid episodes of the Commune. In the new tavern M. Lisbonne's waiters will be the ordinary "black and white" with yellow ribbons to distinguish them from the common herd of garçons. Each refreshment-seeker will be given on entering the cabaret a tin cross, bearing an inscription to the effect that the article in question has not been sold. This legend will be signed "Wilson," and customers will receive their "drinks" or food on tendering the "crosses" to the waiters. At the door of the inn will be two Spanish gendarmes on horseback, whose presence is intended to prove the truth of the old saying, "The Pyrenees exist no longer." The fried provisions to be supplied by M. Lisbonne will be, however, the most remarkable features of the establishment. They will be "done brown" with Legitimist, Orleanist, Bonapartist, Republican, Radical, or Boulangist fat or dripping, and when the customer calls for potatoes à l'Opportuniste they will be handed to him by a mannikin made to represent M. Jules Ferry, who will step out of an extraordinary wall of ingenious mechanism and construction. Potatoes will also be handed around by mannikin Napoleons and Clémenceaus; by a wonderful black horse to typify General Boulanger, and by a rabbit to allegorise the futility of "Revision." M. Lisbonne, being a patriot and a revanchard, will allow only French or Alsatian beers to be consumed on his premises, and, as a crowning attraction to his customers, he is to appear on the opening night in the legendary "dress-coat" which was cleaned with petroleum, and attired in which the "Citizen" presented himself at a memorable reception held by President Carnot in the Elysée.

Localities like the "Mint," "Alsatia," or rather the notorious Cour des Miracles, where of old even the Watch could not enter without the royal authorisation of the Roi des Truands, or "Monarch of the Mendicants," seem to be still in existence in Paris, despite the continuation of that system of "slum-clearing" which was inaugurated under the Empire, when Baron Haussmann was Prefect of the Seine. Quite recently a Paris tradesman—M. Bayle—employed as a clerk a young fellow called Camus, who was not only an expert accountant, but was able to write and to translate German, a qualification which made him doubly valuable to his employer. According to all appearances, Camus was an "utterly" good young man, his only failing being that he had a weakness for the perpetration of atrocious poetry. He scribbled odes on the office-paper, and under his blotting-pad was discovered an ambitious classical composition, in verse, alluding to the deeply-to-be-lamented departure from Olympus of the Gods of Old, who, according to the poet, could not stand the practical and prosaic Nineteenth Century, with its railways, telephones, telegraph-wires, and Towers of Iron. While, however, M. Camus was thus enshrouded in Parnassian mists, he kept a sharp look-out after his master's cheque-book, and succeeded in making himself possessor of about fifty pounds in one week. M. Bayle did not tax his clerk with the thefts, but he went to an Inspector of Police, stated his case, and gave the number of the house in the Rue d'Allemagne at La-Chapelle, in which Camus lived. To the surprise, however, of the tradesman, the Police-Inspector refused to send any of his men to the house in question, alleging that it was too dangerous a place, being full of ruffians and desperadoes of the deepest dye, who thought nothing of stabbing and slaying the guardians of the public peace. Amazed and overcome the tradesman went to another police-officer, who promised to "overhaul" the burglar's Castle, but not unless he had a strong detachment of sturdy constables with him. In the meantime Camus—poet, accountant, linguist, and thief—had disappeared with his booty, leaving behind, as a kind of "cold comfort" to his master, some of his classical compositions and effusions in verse. M. Bayle will, it may safely be presumed, be more careful for the future in the selection of his "young men," and will studiously dispense with the presence of all budding poets on his premises.

On the Bourse to-day the last quotations were: Three per Cents., 83f 7½c (a fall of 27½c); Four and a Half per Cents., 105f 62½c (a fall of 12½c); Italians, 97f 25c (a fall of 35c); Turks, 15f 45c (a fall of 25c); Spanish Exteriors, 75f 70c; Egyptian Unified, 428f 75c; ditto Preference, 520f; and Ottoman Bank, 548f. Suez Canal Shares closed at 2,251f 25c, and Rio Tinto at 592f 37c. All the ground regained yesterday has been lost, and more. There was a heavy fall in Three per Cents., while Four and a Half per Cents. were very weak, and foreign stocks, as a rule, fared even worse. Besides Italians and Turks, Spanish Exteriors, Portuguese, and Egyptian Unified all closed with a fall, while the Russian Loan of 1880, which had hitherto been proof against the agitation, came off as badly. The weakness of to-day's Market is not, however, distinctly traceable to any political incident. There was a fall of 8f 75c in Suez Canal Shares.

Following the Earl and Countess of Londesborough and the Ladies Denison, who have returned to Grosvenor-square from Londesborough Lodge, Scarborough, Viscount and Viscountess Raincliffe arrived in town yesterday from Scarborough.

It is now asserted that the Sultan of Morocco will not visit Tangier until next spring.

A Reuter's telegram, dated Berne, Sept. 28, states: "A motion has been made in the Grand Council of the Canton of Solothurn for the special convocation of the Federal Assembly, in order that the ordinances passed by the Federal Council on May 12 regarding the political police may be annulled."

Sir Evelyn and Lady Baring sailed from Venice yesterday for Alexandria.

An English training-squadron, consisting of four cruisers, under the command of Commodore Markham, arrived at Kiel at noon yesterday.

The statue of the late Lord Shaftesbury, executed by Mr. J. E. Boehm, has been placed upon its pedestal in Westminster Abbey, and arrangements have been made with the Dean for its dedication on Monday afternoon next at four o'clock.

Lieutenant-General Sir H. D. Torrens, the new Governor and Commander-in-Chief, arrived at Malta yesterday morning, on board the P. and O. steamer Britannia. On disembarking, his Excellency was received with the customary salutes, and a guard of honour was drawn up to meet him. The Governor took the prescribed oaths in the Hall of St. Michael and St. George in the Palace of Valetta, and afterwards held a levée.

The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have decided to appoint a committee, consisting of the following flag officers: Admirals Sir William Dowell, K.C.B., Sir Richard Vesey Hamilton, K.C.B., and Rear-Admiral Sir Frederick Richards, K.C.B., for the purpose of thoroughly examining and considering the whole of the detailed statements of the facts in connection with the late Naval Manœuvres, as contained in the reports received from the admirals in command of both squadrons, and reporting generally their views as to the lessons which have been learned during the course of these operations.

The Rev. John Watson, Vicar of Sculcoates, Hull, has been unanimously elected Proctor in Convocation for the Archdeaconry of the East Riding, in the room of the late Canon Trevor, D.D., Rector of Beeford.

Dated Cairo, Sept. 28, a Reuter's telegram says: "The British Government having expressed its opinion on the circular regarding the amendment of the mixed tribunals, the negotiations on the subject between Egypt and the Powers will now recommence. Great Britain agrees to prolong the powers of the present tribunals for five years from March next, but this period will probably be reduced in the course of the negotiations."

Sir J. Fergusson on Foreign Affairs.—Addressing a meeting of his constituents in North-East Manchester last night, Sir James Fergusson, M.P., Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said there was no time within the last three years when the situation abroad had looked so peaceful as now, when there had been less apprehension of an interruption of the peace of the world, and, consequently, less fear of an interference with the peaceful advance of industry and commerce. Some credit rested with Lord Salisbury's Government for this state of things. The Premier had called for no sacrifice of British capital or British blood, but he had settled several questions, and had established peace and confidence with our international neighbours.

Courts-Martial and Desertions.—A War Office return has been issued giving the number of courts-martial, both general and regimental, held during 1887. From this it appears that there were no fewer than 240,448 cases of minor punishment meted out, or a proportion of 123·7 to the average strength. The number of cases of desertions was 5,312, or 2·6 per cent. Of these the Household Cavalry give 1·1 per cent., and the cavalry of the line 3·6 per cent. It appears there were none from the Royal Horse Guards, nor from the 1st, 3rd, 6th, and 7th Dragoon Guards, the 7th and 8th Hussars, and the 12th and 17th Lancers. But all these regiments were in India. From the 6th Dragoons the percentage of desertion was as high as 14·5, and from the depot of the 7th Dragoon Guards 18·1, both being from Canterbury and Shorncliffe. The percentage from the Royal Artillery was 2·9, and from the Royal Engineers 1·1. From the foot guards it was 3·6, the Coldstreams having but 2·3. The infantry of the line average was 2·6, but the percentage was as high as 30·1 in the neighbourhood of large towns in the manufacturing and coal and iron districts. The desertions from colonial corps were only ·6.

Salvation Army.—A Reuter's telegram, dated Neuchatel, Sept. 28, states: "The paradings of the Salvation Army in this city have been prohibited owing to the repeated disturbances to which they have given rise."

The Police and Publicans.—The following order has been issued by the Commissioners to the Metropolitan police: "In all cases in which drunken persons are arrested in or near public-houses, the officer making the apprehension is to note and report any facts which may tend to prove where and under what circumstances the accused obtained the liquor; and in any case in which there is sufficient evidence of the sale of intoxicating liquor to a drunken person, the particulars are to be reported with a view to proceedings being taken against the publican concerned."

IS MARRIAGE A FAILURE?

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Sir—The views to which your paper has given hospitality on the subject which I set a-foot, have been bewildering in their variety, and sometimes astonishing in their fearlessness. What seems to me most satisfactory is the consciousness frequently displayed of the need of reform not only in the marriage laws but our home-life and social intercourse. In spite of innumerable letters from engaged persons and old maids, and a few clergymen, who find in their own contentment a wall of thick darkness which screens from view the wretchedness of others, there are signs that English people are beginning to realise that we are on the threshold of a new era, and that our laws, our customs, and our opinions call for readjustment. The changing status of women is creating a silent revolution, and it is high time to recognise it, and act in harmony with the new conditions of life. Our ideas of marriage must alter with these conditions. "Blue Ensign" and the "Retired Admiral" may see in their own feelings and their own tears an argument in favour of holding tied for life the sober and the drunkard, the sane and the insane, but there are a growing number of people who are not consoled by the thought of "Blue Ensign's" children, nor by that of the "Admiral's" infant who died. The "Admiral" seems to find the whole sanctity of marriage in the child (especially if it dies), the poor wife playing a very secondary part in his idea of marriage, being glorified entirely through the reflected light of the deceased infant. This idea also will not prove immortal in the days that are to come. Opponents have an odd way of using one another's weapons in this controversy. Innumerable have been the letters saying that marriage is not a failure if it is practically an ideal marriage, or, at any rate, if the pair are loving and trusting—if, in short, they fulfil the conditions of the better type of marriage, and remain united because they desire to do so. That is precisely what I say. As "Sybil" pointed out so cleverly, "Blue Ensign" and the other happily married people are all living in a state of "free love," awful as it is to think of. They desire to remain together, so their love is free. "Oh, learned judge, I thank thee for those words." The "happily-married" argument is really summed-up in the words of the "British Matron," who advocates the institution "because she has long experienced its blessings." "Marriage can never be a failure if entered into with a proper spirit," says E. C. Hawkins. This gentleman represents a peculiarly baffling class of opponents, for they place themselves in an unassailable position, which they hold with the unalterable dignity of conscious rectitude, the only drawback being that they have not the remotest conception of the point at issue. The "Country Parson," for instance, thinks not that marriage is a failure, but rather that people fail to do what they might to make it a very real and blessed success. What can be said in answer to this? Nothing; we must give in and pass on.

And now for a brief summary of the reasons for failure or success given by the correspondents. Reasons for failure: Husbands' clubs, ill-temper, a pretty wife, living beyond your income, want of due submission on part of wife, nagging, not being "happy-faced," not having a smile of welcome always ready to receive husband on his return (this reminds one of the famous burglar disarmed by a smile), marrying the first comer for want of social opportunity, marrying girls who are young ladies, marrying girls who are not young ladies, being selfish, being poor, having headaches, not keeping accounts, feeling tired, saying you think the home you came from preferable to the home you came to, making your husband's friends miserable, drinking, incipient softening of the brain, a tendency to homicidal mania, and so on in endless variety.

Among the causes of success are to be noted a taste for preparing dainty dishes for your husband, not telling him of his faults, reforming him very gradually, having a charmingly-decorated table in a cheerfully-arranged room, being dainty in appearance, kissing your husband with rapid certainty whenever he shows the slightest tendency to be unpleasant. The exasperation which such conduct would cause in some people ought to be taken into careful consideration lest tragedies ensue from following of this advice.

"Naval Lieutenant's" letter must not be passed over in silence. He goes to stay with a friend in Brittany, who has a castle, where are assembled the sixty-six descendants of the host's great-grandmother. "Was the marriage of that great-grandmother a failure?" the Lieutenant indignantly asks. As having some bearing on the question he mentions that his father, who is a Scottish nobleman, also has a castle, and that he likewise had a great-grandmother who lies buried in the family vault. How could marriage be a failure in those circumstances? One's brain spins at the question, and in silent melancholy one leaves it unanswered, and "Naval Lieutenant" triumphant. The "Divine institution" argument is dealt with by "Anti-Cant" and "J. Thornton Hoskins," who show that polygamy was the practice of the Chosen People, and that in the days of Christ the custom still continued. Did St. Paul regard slavery as a Divine institution when he bids slaves obey their masters? This question of Mr. Hoskins's is very pertinent. To Mr. Clifton, who recommends girls to enter marriage in the spirit of Katherine, the tamed shrew, I would suggest that if a woman has not sufficient sense of the independence and of the equal rights of the two members to a partnership, she is very apt to revenge herself for her subordination by seeking for power in other and less straightforward ways, and that if once that spirit creeps into the household, good-bye to all hope of union and camaraderie which is half the secret of happy married life. One of the correspondents complains of the rarity of this spirit among Englishmen and women, and with only too good cause.

And now we come to the letters on home life and social intercourse. Would that every one of them were taken to heart and acted upon. A reform in these departments going hand-in-hand with the establishment of juster laws is what is imperatively needed. Where law could only bring about improvement of conduct by restrictive action I would abandon legal help, and fall back upon social reforms. For instance, as regards the age at which people should marry. I heartily agree with "Isonomy" in opposing State interference of this paternal character in domestic matters. Having made the laws equal for all men and women, and given as much liberty to each as is consistent with the liberty of all and the welfare of the community, the improvement in conduct ought to come from the people themselves, and not from restrictive laws, which we want to make as few as possible. The valuable letters of "Observer" and "Anglo-Celt" deserve especial attention. They see not only the unpleasantness, but the actual danger of our home and social sloughs of despond. "A Young Man from the Country" complains of his isolation, and that of many others in his position, and says that no one holds out a saving hand, so that the temptations to "go wrong" are almost overwhelming. And English men and women let this continue! If only there were a little more frankness and friendliness among us, if only we had less elephantine heaviness of movement as regards all things social! "Onlooker" shows a tendency to pick out minor truths, and to bring us back to the dismal leave-it-alone state of feeling from which nothing is to be hoped. The matter is of vital importance, and I wonder sometimes if it would not be possible to set going a guild or society to be formed by all those who desire to take steps in the improvement of home and social life. An organisation, however simple, enables individuals to use their energies and carry out their intentions who would otherwise be isolated and helpless. The guild would take for its basic ideas—(1) the importance of more frequent meetings on simple and friendly terms of men and women, discountenancing, of course, all silly ideas about expected proposals and love-making whenever there appeared the slightest signs of interest and liking; such interference with human relations would be regarded as vulgar and undignified; (2) the encouragement in each family of the special tastes of its members, and the establishment of interesting occupations of some kind or other, according to the taste and abilities of the family. One family I knew used to have weekly lectures and discussions of a most amusing nature, each member providing a short discourse in turn, requiring a certain amount of reading and thought in its preparation, which led to the collection of a school-room library and other additions to the interests of the home. Besides lectures, concerts, exhibitions of sketches of work and a thousand other things might be given, the idea lending itself to indefinite expansion. With regard to social intercourse, the members of the guild could organise among themselves or with their neighbours plans for weekly receiving of friends, without ceremony and without further refreshment than the usual after-dinner tea and coffee. Of course this is only a rough suggestion, but it seems to me that something of the kind might be organised if the members of every home where The Daily Telegraph is received were to join hands through its pages in some such common endeavour. Through changes of this nature we may look for happier homes, and through them for happier future marriages. In the guild and association we need, as a first step, the offer of some one who would organise it. Emerson says that life is comic and pitiful when each of us is engrossed in mere local and personal matters; that a man must take his conscious part in affairs of general and universal moment before he attains the true dignity of a human being. Let those who desire to take their place as conscious helpers in the progress of their age, and as bestowers of happiness on others—not on one or two only, but on thousands and thousands—see their opportunity and grasp it.

The suggestions made by "Mater" about concerts, recreation rooms, &c., for towns and villages, and elsewhere, and that each church and chapel should provide similar opportunities of amusement and pleasure, are admirable, and will, I hope, be carried out. "It is terrible," says "Observer," "to think of so many lives wasted by stolid adherence to social laws and customs, of so many families brought to grief or wild rebellion against a state of things as hard to suffer as difficult to comprehend." These are golden words, and when they are fully laid to heart a silent revolution will be worked throughout the country. Would that I had space to collect together all the admirable proposals made in these letters. Mr. A. F. Barfield's suggestion to build homes where children could be fed and educated on payment of a sum by the parents, might, if adopted, prove a boon to children, whether their parents were divorced or undivorced, happy or unhappy. The proposal resembles a suggestion of my own, made in my article which is to appear in the November number of the "Westminster Review," and is naturally particularly interesting to me on that account. There is much prejudice against any such scheme, although it would not necessarily imply separation of parents and children. Would that there were a prejudice as strong against the present ill-treatment of children by their parents, against their exposure to the most degrading moral atmosphere, and, in the richer classes, to their training by ignorant nurses and scarcely less ignorant mothers!

There are projects in plenty for affording greater facilities for divorce in cases of insanity, drunkenness, penal servitude, &c., also proposals for the abolition of actions for breach of promise of marriage, and for making illegitimate children legitimate to the mother. All these measures seem to me just and necessary. "Solicitor" puts the case for legal reform very clearly; while, as a means of focussing all the force evoked by this controversy, we have the letters of Mr. J. Paynter Allen, Secretary of the Marriage Law Reform Association, Parliament-street, proposing to hold a conference during the autumn session, and inviting all who are interested in the movement to give their support. I would urge upon every one to regard this Association as the active centre of the movement, and to endeavour to cause all others that may be in process of formation to affiliate themselves to this one body, so that the line of action determined on may represent the collective opinion of the whole country. Branches could be established, if necessary, after the conference.

And now let me warmly thank those who have expressed their sympathy with me in the endeavour which I have made to point out the need of reform—"Sybil," "Edith Maxwell," "Pro Bono Publico," "A Working Woman," and many others—besides those who, while disagreeing with my views, do not believe that I desire to degrade, but to elevate, the relations of men and women. There is scarcely a view on this great question which has not been represented. John Stuart Mill's Malthusianism, the right of the woman to decide the number of her children, the absurdity and the cruelty of large families—injurious as they are to the mother, the children, the bread-winner, and the State—the importance of founding marriage on "elective affinity"—all these views have been expressed, and even "Twenty-Five," who has the courage to give her favourable experience of a union of some years without legal ratification has not been denied admittance.

I have been accused of desiring to introduce a system of marriage so entirely unrestrained that it would be indistinguishable from promiscuity. This is certainly a false accusation, but I have not been overwhelmingly anxious to reiterate my denial, feeling sure that there was not the slightest danger of English people surrendering even the most glaring abuses of their marriage system without a valiant tussle for the threatened treasures; while, on the other hand, I felt convinced that suggestions perpetually explained and fenced round from all possible misconception would fail to bring into prominence the true principle from which, as I think, the movement ought to take its impetus, viz., the right of every individual to freedom of action on condition of his respecting a similar freedom in others. I desired, more than to see the divorce laws made equal for the two sexes, more than any individual improvement in our legal machinery, to draw attention to the ideal towards which all reforms ought to point; for otherwise our steering would be as the steering of a rudderless ship bound for no particular port, but cruising about with excellent intentions but with no purpose or plan of action. The principle towards which modern reforms in marriage ought to point is the frank recognition of the equality of all subjects, male and female, before the law, and also the recognition that every member of the community ought to be free to enter into what contracts he pleases, provided he injures no other individual, and does not interfere with the welfare of the community. It seemed to me better that England should rave for a while about the dreadful things which this principle, if suddenly and unwisely applied, might undoubtedly involve, than that the principle itself should not be proclaimed, or that the present injustice which causes misery to so many should be overlooked on the ground that the exceptions must suffer for the rest of the community.

To an imaginative and impulsive people one would naturally have used more caution in the presentation of such a principle, but I felt that, whatever might be said against the Englishman, his bitterest foe could not accuse him of an ill-regulated imagination, and so with reasoned recklessness I made but slight protest when the "British Matron" let the sun go down upon her wrath, after shouting a war-whoop to Mrs. Grundy. I could scarcely expect to have a quiet time of it.

But now it may be well to state once more that there has been misunderstanding of my meaning about free marriage. Had I meant a union intentionally temporary I should not have used the word marriage. The State has to choose which form of union it will ratify and enforce for those couples who may apply for its protection, and it naturally chooses what must be called the national or the monogamic form of union. We cannot ask a State to register and protect any union which does not propose to be for life, dissoluble only when the terms of the contract are broken. If caprice were guarded against by decreeing, as Mr. Lowe suggests, the lapse of a year between the notice of a desire for divorce (subject to contract) and the divorce itself, I see no reason for believing that the free contract system, properly managed, would cause more frequent divorces than now take place; that is, supposing the social reforms to be going on at the same time, a condition necessary to the full success of all legal improvements.

The plan of having marriages terminable at will in ten, fifteen, or twenty years does not strike me as inherently impossible, but it has the evil effect of seeming to lower the ideal of national monogamy, and would, I think, be far less satisfactory than making marriage a life-long union dissoluble according to the terms of the contract. The State would have to reject certain reasons for divorce if they were so trivial as to imply an intention to evade the law and to form an intentionally temporary union under the ægis of the State. Incompatibility of temper, however, must, I think, certainly be allowed as a reason if the pair can satisfy the Court that it exists. A German correspondent tells us that this cause is sufficient in his country; yet we do not hear that in Germany there is a perpetual divorcing and remarrying, as we are told would be the case if such a reason held good here.

One of the hardest things ever said against marriage as it stands was said by some of my bitterest opponents: "If," they say, "there were greater liberty of divorce the country would swarm with cast-off wives of over forty." If this be true what a hopeless failure marriage must be! If this be true, what a confession that our marriage system is rotten from the foundation! Unions must be indeed unsuitable, unhappy, ill-formed and ill-cemented, if after so many years of life together swarms of couples have failed to become dear and necessary to one another. To bind the unwilling in a hated union is not to secure the sanctity of marriage, but its degradation. However, we are told by Americans that by far the greater number of applications for divorce come from women and not from men; therefore this argument fails to receive support from experience. Marriage is not quite so bad as its advocates would make out.

The first step for us to take, as it seems to me, is to alter the divorce laws as radically as public opinion will permit, and to reform the other laws affecting marriage at the same time and in the same degree. Then, as soon as possible—simultaneously if it can be—to offer a choice of several legal contracts to the couple to choose from. Probably the forthcoming book on the subject, to be published by Messrs. Trübner and Co., will give us good models for the purpose. Later on would come the entire freedom of contract—subject only to the limitation specified—and thence gradually the entire redemption of marriage and the dying out of prostitution. I will close this already too long letter with the endeavour to leave last on the mind of my readers, not the restrictions and the modifications—which I quite admit are absolutely necessary in applying a principle—but the general principle itself on which the discussion has been raised. To do this I will quote from Wilhelm von Humboldt's "Ideas respecting an Attempt to Decide the Limits of the Functions of the State," written in 1792: "A union so closely allied with the very nature of the respective individuals must be attended with the most hurtful consequences when the State attempts to regulate it by law, or, through the force of its institutions, to make it repose on anything save simple inclination. The radical error seems to be that the law commands; whereas such a relation cannot mould itself according to external arrangements; and, wherever coercion and guidance come into collision with inclination they divert it still further from the proper path; and the results of such coercive institutions do not at all correspond to the intentions in which they originate." Galileo said: "We cannot teach truth to another, we can only help him to find it." In this respect we are one and all in need of help from one another, of the impetus which the clash of opinion gives. Meanwhile, if for no other reason than its boundless publicity and perfect freedom, this correspondence has played a useful part, and leaves us with more hope for the future than it found us.

Micheldever, Sept. 27. MONA CAIRD.

The New York Herald, in its edition of Sunday, the 16th inst., says: "In the current number of the 'Westminster Review' an article appears signed by Mrs. Mona Caird and entitled 'Is Marriage a Failure?' The treatment of the subject raised a storm of approval and dissent throughout Great Britain, and The Daily Telegraph published from day to day the letters it received on the subject, some of which the Herald reproduces." Amongst the communications quoted are those of "British Matron," "A Matrimonial Failure," "A Believer in the Sanctity of Marriage," "A. B.," and "Not for Self." On the succeeding day our American contemporary, following up the subject, describes the correspondence as "the all-absorbing topic of discussion in England," and again it reproduces from our columns a series of the most representative letters on both sides of the controversy, including those signed "Ex-Royal British Artist," "T. E. Cleaver," "Medicine Doctor," "A Separated Woman," and "A Disappointed One"; and on the next day appeared the communications made to our columns by "An Old Bachelor," "Not Me," "Widowed," "C. H. Collette," "Shattered Nerves," "A Leicestershire Dame," and "James E. Venning." In its leading article the Herald expresses the opinion that marriage is not a failure. It writes:

> The topic is one of great and serious interest. In all quarters of the globe where newspapers are published a daily column is devoted to the results of unfortunate mating. Divorce courts have more than they can do to untie the knot which was tied by the Church amid general hilarity, earnest prayers, and good wishes. When France opened the doors of her judicial tribunals to such cases the crowd outside pressing for entrance was as large as that which jams the corridor of a theatre on a gala night. Extracts from the London Daily Telegraph, printed elsewhere, show that Englishmen also are pondering the mighty problem. It sometimes seems as though the world were going to pieces; that every double team were only anxious to get out of harness; that men and women who in the halcyon days of betrothal—not long ago—were irresistibly drawn together in a close embrace are now at arms' length and trying to drive each other further apart. Naturally one is set thinking by such cumulative and undeniable facts. What does it all mean? Is the free lover, after all, right? Should marriage be simply a co-partnership, to continue as long as both parties agree, to be ended at the first family jar, the first pout of disappointment or fit of jealousy? Well, we think not. If the man and woman who are conjoined by their own free will were alone to be consulted, that would be one thing. But the family relation has a far-reaching religious and social influence, and the man who would treat it lightly puts his hand on the very throat of the community. Easy marriage and easy divorce are remnants of barbarism, and indicate that the tie is both personal and selfish. Let it once be made known that men and women may live together as long as their fancy holds, that they can swing apart whenever they please, and what becomes of the children and what becomes of the moral sense of the nation? You take the temper out of the steel and convert it into base metal. You have no longer a Damascus blade, but a piece of worthless wrought iron. No, marriage is not a failure, but a great many men and women are fools. That answers Mr. Emerson's question. Marriage and the home which it builds up are the divinest principles in a sound political economy. They insure the preservation of society, are the source of inspiration, comfort, encouragement, and happiness. But men and women sometimes go into marriage with a stupidity that is incurable, and with a recklessness that indicates idiocy. Marriage as a stable and unchangeable relation would be all right if men and women had more brains, or used the little they have. More than that, marriage is no more a failure now than it has always been. The world is not growing worse; it is growing better. But to-day, if there is a family row, an embitterment or estrangement, there are sixteen reporters on the front door steps trying to ring the bell and get the story for a spread head article. Families are turned inside out and upside down; secrets are impossible. One damn at the breakfast table because the coffee is thick is like the "shot heard round the world." Years ago the trouble was just as great, but it wasn't known. Now everything is known. There is less evil in the world than ever before, but what there is is told to everybody. It is blindness to say the old times were better than these. They were not; they were worse. The world is jogging along slowly towards the millennium, but it is an accommodation train, with frequent stops for refreshments. Marriage is not a failure; but once in a while you find a man and a woman who are most egregious failures.

The Court.

BALMORAL, Sept. 28.

The Queen went out yesterday morning, accompanied by Princess Alice of Hesse; and in the afternoon her Majesty drove with Princess Alice, attended by the Hon. Harriet Phipps.

Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, with the Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud, and Prince Albert Victor of Wales, who arrived at Abergeldie yesterday, visited the Queen in the afternoon.

The Marquis of Hartington, who is staying at Mar Lodge, and Earl Cadogan had the honour of dining with the Queen and the Royal family.

THE EMPEROR FREDERICK.

The Central News learns from an authoritative source that Sir Morell Mackenzie's forthcoming work will consist of three parts: First, historical and narrative, being a true version of everything connected with the case of the Emperor Frederick from the time Dr. Mackenzie was called in at the end of May, 1887. In this portion controversy will, as far as possible, be avoided, only such contentious matters being introduced as were actually in dispute between the doctors during the treatment. The Prince's daily life, habits, and views will be described, and many details of great interest will be made known. The second part of the work will be entirely controversial, and will consist of two sections. In the first the author will show that under the circumstances of the case the plan he adopted was the only one which had a scientific basis. He will contend that as a matter of fact his treatment prolonged the life of the Emperor, and he will also criticise the treatment of the German surgeons. Sir Morell Mackenzie will further demonstrate that if the illustrious patient had been left in his hands the patient would have lived at least twenty months longer. In the second section of the controversial part Dr. Mackenzie will deal in a trenchant manner with the various individual reports of the German surgeons. The third part of the work will be statistical, and will show how terrible have been the results of external operations on the larynx. The general tendency of the book is intended to prove that the Emperor need not necessarily have been a victim of cancer. The book will contain more than twenty illustrations and various fac-similes of slips of paper written by the Emperor to Sir Morell Mackenzie, giving consent to his treatment.

EADE'S CELEBRATED GOUT and

RHEUMATIC PILLS, the safest and most effectual Cure for Gout, Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, Lumbago, Pains in the Head, Face, and Limbs, &c. They require neither confinement nor alteration of diet, and in no case can their effect be injurious. Mr. Frank Wright, the comedian, writing from the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Birmingham, on Feb. 15, 1887, says: "Your pills will keep off any attack of gout if taken at the first twinge as prescribed, and if after the disease has set in will cure in two or three days."—Prepared only by GEORGE EADE, 72, Goswell-road, London, and sold by all Chemists, in bottles, 1s. 1½d.; three in one, 2s. 9d.
Agent for Paris: Midy, 113, Faubourg St. Honoré.

CAUTION.—STEEDMAN'S SOOTHING POWDER for CHILDREN CUTTING their TEETH.—The proprietor finds it necessary to give a special caution against IMITATIONS of this old-established family medicine, some of which in outward appearance so closely resemble the original as to have deceived many purchasers, and for their own security it is requisite for them carefully to observe in every case that the words "John Steedman, Chemist, Walworth, Surrey," are engraved on the Government stamp affixed to each packet, without which they are not genuine.

PROPERTY for SALE and WANTED.

FREEHOLD.—For SALE, eight miles from Brighton and 44 from London, upon the main London-road (coach passes the house), 1½ mile from Burgess-hill Station, NEW CLOSE, Clayton, Hassocks. An unusual opportunity is offered to purchase the above most delightful property of 45 acres by paying only £375 cash down, the remainder being left by advertiser on mortgage for five years certain at 4 per cent. interest. The land is in splendid condition and is mostly grass. The present tenant has occupied for nearly 30 years. He vacates on Oct. 11 next, when possession would be given to a purchaser. The lowest price is £75 an acre, which includes the charming residence, stabling, farm buildings, and timber. The estate is partially enclosed by an oak park fence, and overlooks a gentleman's park. It is in a choice situation, being surrounded by large properties. There is a small stream running through the land, which affords very excellent trout fishing. The house is a delightful old-fashioned genteel farm residence, occupying a pleasant position on high ground, is approached by small carriage drive, and contains large dining and drawing rooms, two smaller sitting rooms, six medium-sized bed-rooms, and servants' offices. Company's water laid on. The place is very suitable for a gentleman's hunting box, the residence of a small family or a retired business man. Its nearness to Brighton makes it suitable for a dairy and poultry farm, and in summer a large revenue could be obtained by taking boarders. The lawn and garden is a great attraction. There is a full-sized tennis court and summer house, a very large orchard well planted with fruit trees of the finest sorts in full bearing.—For fuller particulars and photograph of house apply (no agents) to the Owner, Henry Blaker, Percy Lodge, Burgess-hill, Sussex.

Important Business Premises, in Bedford-street, Plymouth, for Sale, Monday, Oct. 8, 1888.

WOOLLAND and SON are instructed to SELL by AUCTION, on the PREMISES, on MONDAY, Oct. 8, at four p.m. (subject to such conditions as will then be produced), the very valuable and important BUSINESS PREMISES, 24, Bedford-street, Plymouth, now in the occupation of Messrs. Eyre and Sons, who for many years have carried on the very extensive and successful business of cabinetmakers and upholsterers. The premises consist of a spacious shop, with a frontage of 31 feet on Bedford-street, over which is a lofty show room of equal dimensions. At the rear of the shop are two rooms, over which are three rooms and w.c. On the first floor, leading from the show room, are four rooms, and on the second floor three rooms. Separated from the main building by an extensive courtyard (in which is a scullery and washhouse) are commodious workshops, three stories in height. Total area of land about 4,000 superficial feet. This block of premises occupies undoubtedly the most valuable site in Plymouth, and its extensive frontage and uniform depth give it additional advantages for the erection of new and costly premises, for which there is an increasing demand, at large rentals. It is immediately opposite the Globe Hotel, and at the conjunction of George-street, Bedford-street, Bank-street, Frankfort-street, and Russell-street. There is, therefore, a concentration of traffic at its doors, causing it to be thus unrivalled for all business purposes. Possession can be had on completion of purchase.—To view apply on the premises, and for further particulars to the Auctioneers, or to Messrs. Batchelor and Geake, Solicitors, 3, Parade, Plymouth.

LETTERS FROM AND TO

CHARLES KIRKPATRICK SHARPE, Esq. Edited by Alexander Allardyce, Author of "Memoir of Admiral Lord Keith, K.B.," &c. With a Memoir by the Rev. W. K. R. Bedford. Illustrated with two portraits of Mr. Sharpe, and numerous portraits and etchings reproduced from his drawings. In two vols. 8vo, £2 12s. 6d.

"They furnish a literary feast of considerable piquancy and great variety. . . . They reveal a rare individuality that forms a fascinating study. They illuminate the pathways of life trodden by our fathers, and show us the men of the days of Scott and his contemporaries as they talked and wrote and thought. . . . They give us pleasing glimpses of men and women with whose names we are familiar in the records of literary and social life that has just become historical. . . . They have restored to the world a buried treasure of rare and curious interest, and of incalculable price."—Scotsman.
